Principles and Practice of Semantic Web Reasoning Francois Bry, Nicola Henze, Jan Maluszynski, 2003-11-20 The Semantic Web is a major endeavor aimed at enriching the existing Web with metadata and processing methods so as to provide Web based systems with advanced so called intelligent capabilities in particular with context awareness and decision support. The advanced capabilities striven for in most Semantic Web applications primarily call for reasoning. Reasoning capabilities are offered by existing Semantic Web languages such as BPEL4WS, BPML, ConsVISO, DAML S, JTP, TRIPLE and others. These languages however were developed mostly from functionality centered e.g. ontology reasoning or access validation or application centered e.g. Web service retrieval and composition perspectives. A perspective centered on the reasoning techniques e.g. forward or backward chaining, tableau like methods, constraint reasoning etc. complementing the above mentioned activities appears desirable for Semantic Web systems and applications. The workshop on Principles and Practice of Semantic Web Reasoning which took place on December 8, 2003 in Mumbai, India, was the first of a series of scientific meetings devoted to such a perspective.

Just as the current Web is inherently heterogeneous in data formats and data semantics, the Semantic Web will be inherently heterogeneous in its reasoning forms. Indeed, any single form of reasoning turns out to be unrealistic in the Semantic Web. For example, ontology reasoning in general relies on monotonic negation for the metadata, often can be fully specified while databases, Web databases and Web based information systems call for non monotonic reasoning for one would not specify non existing trains in a railway timetable. Constraint reasoning is needed when dealing with time for time intervals have to be dealt with while forward and/or backward chaining is the reasoning of choice when coping with database like views for views i.e. virtual data can be derived from actual data using operations such as join and projections.

Disqualified Eddie Hart, Dave Newhouse, 2017

Having previously tied the world record, Eddie Hart was a strong favorite to win the 100 meter dash at the 1972 Olympics in Munich, Germany. Then the inexplicable happened: he was disqualified after arriving seconds late for a quarterfinal heat. Ten years of training to become the World's Fastest Human, the title attached to an Olympic 100 meter champion, was lost in a heartbeat. But who was to blame? Hart's disappointment, though excruciating, was just one of many subplots to the most tragic of Olympic Games at which eight Arab terrorists assassinated eleven Israeli athletes and coaches as the world watched in horror. Five terrorists were killed but three escaped to their homeland as heroes and were never brought to trial. Swimmer Mark Spitz won seven gold medals but was rushed out of Germany afterward because he was Jewish. Other American athletes besides Hart seemed jinxed in Munich. The USA men's basketball team thought it had earned the gold medal but the Russians received it instead through an unprecedented technicality. Bob Seagren, the defending pole vault champion, was barred from using his poles and forced to compete with unfamiliar poles. And swimmer Rick DeMont lost one gold medal and the possibility of winning a second because of an allergy drug that had passed U.S. Olympic Committee specifications but was disallowed by the International Olympic Committee. It was that kind of Olympics, confusing to some, fatal to others. Hart traveled back to Munich forty-three years later to relive his utter disappointment. He returned to the same stadium where he did earn a gold medal in the 400 meter relay. In Disqualified, his interesting life story told with author Dave Newhouse, sheds entirely new light on what really happened at Munich. It includes interviews with Spitz and the victimized American athletes.

and conversations with two Israelis who escaped the terrorists And Hart finally learned who was responsible for his disqualifications and those of Rey Robinson who was in the same heat leading to an interesting epilogue in which these two seniors reflect on the opportunity denied them long ago      Proceedings [of The] Annual Meeting National College Physical Education Association for Men (U.S.),1973
