Anthologies of British Poetry ,2021-11-22 From Tottel s Miscellany 1557 to the last twentieth century Oxford Book of English Verse 1999 anthologies have been a prime institution for the preservation and mediation of poetry The importance of anthologies for creating and re creating the canon of English poetry for introducing new programmes of poetry as a record of changing poetic fashions audience tastes and reading practices or as a profitable literary commodity has often been asserted Despite its impact however the poetry anthology in itself has attracted surprisingly little critical interest in Britain or elsewhere in the English speaking world This volume is the first publication to explore the largely unmapped field of poetry anthologies in Britain Essays written from a wide range of perspectives in literary and cultural studies and the point of view of poets editors publishers and cultural institutions aim to do justice to the typological functional and historical variety with which this form of publication has manifested itself from early modern print culture to the postmodern age of the world wide web

Planisphere John Ashbery, 2009-12-01 Breathlike Just as the day could use another hour I need another idea Not a concept or a slogan Something more like a rut made thousands of years ago by one of the first wheels as it rolled along It never came back to see what it had done and the rut just stayed there not thinking of itself or calling attention to itself in any way Sun baked it Water stood or rather sat in it Wind covered it with dust then blew it away Always it was available to itself when it wished to be which wasn't often Then there was a cup and ball theory I told you about A lot of people had left the coast Squirt conditions obtained I forgot I overwhelmed you once upon a time between everybody's sound sleep and waking afterward trying to piece together what had happened The rut glimmered through centuries of snow and after I suppose it was trying to make some point but we never found out about that having come to know each other years later when our interest in zoning had revived again
