Managing In Academics:

Managing Academics Richard Philip Winter, 2017-01-27 Managing Academics contrasts three alternative perspectives of managing professionalism quality of worklife prosocial identity with the dominant perspective of managerialism in higher education institutions The intention of the contrast is to 1 challenge the notion that managing academics is a unitary values free process 2 raise awareness of managing as a social process in which values and identity questions resonate as issues of importance to managers and the managed and 3 help academic managers influence and balance hybrid perspectives of managing and scholarship

Class Management Horace Adelbert Hollister, 1915 Managing Students John M. Gledhill, 1999 Managing Students guides managers and administrators through the complexities which can lurk within the apparently straightforward tasks of student administration. It ranges from the big issues of judicial review to the seemingly trivial question of why examination desks move. It explores how managers can balance the needs of the students with those of the institution, how they can make sure they have thought of all the things that can go wrong and how they can ensure that academics and students understand why things have to be done a certain way. It provides clear and helpful guidance on how to approach the incredibly varied tasks of student administration, on for instance how disabled students take examinations, whether the courts can overturn examination results, what you can write in references, the many ways in which students can cheat and the rationale behind degree ceremonies. Managing Students is both an accessible guide to the relevant issues and a practical hands-on professional text for all those involved in student administration.

School Management Alfred Holbrook, 1872 The Changing Dynamics of Higher Education V. Lynn Meek, Leo Goedegebuure, Rui Santiago, Teresa Carvalho, 2010-07-16. Known as either soft or hard managerialism, new managerialism or new public management, this new narrative has irrespective of moniker permeated the institutions of higher education almost everywhere. Taking this as its context, this volume is founded on a comprehensive international comparative analysis of the evolving role of middle level academic managers, deans, heads of department and their equivalents. The chapters address key questions that will determine the future of academe: have the imperatives of management theory caused a realignment of the values and expectations of middle level academic managers? In what way do the new expectations placed on this group shape the academic profession as a whole? And whose interests do middle level academic managers represent? Based on material presented at one of the high level Douro Seminars on research into tertiary education, this volume systematically combines theoretical views with empirical analysis. It argues that managerialist pressure has resulted in changes in the way academic performance is measured. There has been a shift in criteria away from research reputation, teaching and scholarship to the measurement of performance based upon management capacities. This has given middle level academic managers a pivotal role halfway between the predilections of high level decision makers and the maintenance of academic values and control. The enhanced expectations and more defined functions of middle level academic managers are in clear contrast to earlier times when the position was considered a public spirited rite of passage for career minded academics. Despite this, the contributors to this book believe that the middle level managers in the ten countries examined are neither corporate lackeys nor champions of academe. It is becoming increasingly clear that the ability of organisations to achieve their aims is largely dependent on the skill and dedication of middle managers. Past studies of organisational dynamics have been preoccupied with the executive level of management. This text, which will be of great interest to researchers and policy makers alike, attempts to redress the balance.
