The Mansions of Limbo Joseph Roccasalvo, 2009-04-02 This is a collection of stories about people who are almost happy stuck in a kind of beatitude that does not beatify They seemed doomed to pursue happiness in marginal places only to find that bliss is doled out in measured amounts Hankering for satisfaction in a shifting world they live lives of unquiet desperation a connoisseur of oriental culture erotically smitten by a Japanese goldfish a specialist in classics pursuing a student whose profile matches one on a Roman coin itself the image of his dead son identical twins whose loss of their brothers draws them together through an obituary ad a pope whose heart transplant has him making strange post operative choices a satiric theologian whose wit earns him a place on the Index of forbidden books an Abyssinian cat who passes for a Coptic Christian The premise of each story begins as wildly implausible proves arguable until the conclusion becomes incontestable The characters may be stuck but better a mansion in limbo they argue than a high rise in heaven By refusing to say what is bad or good the last story leaves it to circumstance to assess the outcome It seems to say that we all struggle with divided lives engaging on earth in a shuttle diplomacy between limbo and heaven

Purgatorial Flame Sebastian David Guy Knowles, 1990. In this study of a significant period of modern British literature, Sebastian D. G. Knowles argues that Modernism did not expire in 1939 to return as Contemporary Literature in 1945. Rather than marking a hiatus in British literature, the Second World War continued the march of literary ideas and provoked an astonishingly cohesive response to a common catastrophe. A Purgatorial Flame centers upon the artimes work of seven British modernists: Woolf, MacNeice, Eliot, Tolkien, Lewis, Williams, and Waugh. Although none of these is generally considered a wartime writer, all wrote their finest or most mature work under the shadow of the Second World War. Whether waiting for war to be declared, waiting for it to start in earnest, or waiting for bombs to fall, all expressed that waiting through the image of purgatory. A Purgatorial Flame draws these writers together in an attempt to extend the accepted range of Modernism. The Second World War is in danger of becoming a memory of a memory; its literature ensures that it will never be so. This book provides a critically needed reassessment of that literature, serving as both a reminder and a celebration. A Purgatorial Flame will be of interest to scholars and students of modern British literature. The English Stage J. L. Styan, 1996-07-13. The English Stage tells the story of drama through its many changes in style and convention from medieval times to the present day. With a wide sweep of coverage, John Styan analyses the key features of staging, including early street theatre and public performance, the evolution of the playhouse and the private space, and the pairing of theory and stagecraft in the works of modern dramatists. He focuses on the conventions by which playwrights, actors, and their audience create the phenomenon of theatre and the way such conventions have changed over time. Styan can be considered among a small number of influential scholars who have helped to develop theatre history from its origins in literary studies into an independent and respected
