

A woman with long brown hair is sitting cross-legged on a wooden deck. She is holding a white mug with both hands, and a wisp of steam is rising from it. She is looking off to the side, towards a calm body of water. In the background, there is a dense forest of evergreen trees under a soft, hazy sky. The overall mood is peaceful and contemplative.

Keener, 2011-11-01 Christianity Today 2013 Book Award Winner Winner of The Foundation for Pentecostal Scholarship's 2012 Award of Excellence 2011 Book of the Year Christianbook.com's Academic Blog Most modern prejudice against biblical miracle reports depends on David Hume's argument that uniform human experience precluded miracles. Yet current research shows that human experience is far from uniform. In fact, hundreds of millions of people today claim to have experienced miracles. New Testament scholar Craig Keener argues that it is time to rethink Hume's argument in light of the contemporary evidence available to us. This wide-ranging and meticulously researched two-volume study presents the most thorough current defense of the credibility of the miracle reports in the Gospels and Acts. Drawing on claims from a range of global cultures and taking a multidisciplinary approach to the topic, Keener suggests that many miracle accounts throughout history and from contemporary times are best explained as genuine divine acts lending credence to the biblical miracle reports.

G. Wallace, Jesse Bazzul, Marc Higgins, Sara Tolbert, 2021-12-07 This open access edited volume invites transdisciplinary scholars to re-vision science education in the era of the Anthropocene. The collection assembles the works of educators from many walks of life and areas of practice together to help reorient science education toward the problems and peculiarities associated with the geologic times many call the Anthropocene. It has become evident that science education the way it is currently institutionalized in various forms of school science, government policy, classroom practice, educational research, and public-private research laboratories is ill-equipped and ill-conceived to deal with the expansive and urgent contexts of the Anthropocene. Paying homage to myopic knowledge systems, rigid state education directives, and academic professional communities intent on reproducing the same practices, knowledges, and relationships that have endangered our shared world, this volume presents a presence that is misdirected. This volume brings together diverse scholars to reimagine the field in times of precarity. Methods of Attainment Newton N. Riddell, 1921
