Drysdale, 2003 Louis Veron became director of the Académie Royale de Musique in 1831 and managed it at his own risks, perils and fortune It had been poorly managed in the Restoration period with too rapid a turnover of directors much waste and many abuses With great determination and flair Veron immediately initiated substantial changes in order to cut costs and raise receipts The great success of Robert le Diable both artistically and financially was pivotal to his own success and he did indeed make a fortune In so doing however he was too single minded and fell out with all the State authorities He failed to keep them informed and too often breached the obligations in his Cahier des charges He resigned in 1835 with eighteen months of his six year concession still to run The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians: Glinka to Harp Stanley Sadie, John Tyrrell, 2001 This reference classic has approximately doubled in size since its last publication 20 years ago and the expansion involves more than the thorough revision and addition of articles about music of the past More articles about 20th century composers and composer performers have been added as well as topical articles about the gender related multicultural and interdisciplinary ways that music is now being studied Add to these changes that New Grove is also available online making it a source that would have made its many faceted creator Sir George Grove proud Outstanding reference sources American Libraries May 2002

Nineteenth-century Music Jon W. Finson, 2002 This up to date view of nineteenth century classical music places a strong emphasis on the history of opera and on schematic representations of musical structure and form The book presents a highly concise survey of nineteenth century music tailored for the increasingly limited amount of time available to readers for the study of any one period and focuses specifically on the central repertory heard today in the concert hall and at the opera house The volume provides an overview and background information on nineteenth century music including the Viennese
