Opera On Film:

Opera, Ideology and Film Jeremy Tambling,1987 Opera Cinema Joseph Attard,2022-06-16 Since 2006 leading opera companies have beamed their shows to thousands of cinema screens all over the world live Opera cinema is the most successful marriage of this elaborate esoteric art form and the silver screen In the twenty first century more people watch opera on cinema screens than the stage But what is different about watching Massenet at the multiplex compared to a traditional stage performance Is opera cinema a new hybrid art form in its own right or merely a new way of engaging with an old one Is it bringing new opera fans into the fold Is there a danger it could one day eclipse the stage altogether This book deals with these questions by charting the history of opera transmissions exploring how digital media changes our relationship with culture and inviting a group of opera virgins to give their impressions on this developing cultural experience

Opera on Screen Ken Wlaschin,1997 This is a guide in book form and on CD ROM to the thousands of films and videos featuring operas and opera singers in the last one hundred years The guide has been organized alphabetically as an encyclopedia with entries on operas operettas zarzuelas singers composers writers conductors and subjects of interest Special subject entries include animated opera best opera on film best operetta on film castratos divas directors of opera on film directors of opera on TV filmmakers on stage first operas on film first operas on TV imaginary operas in films operas and operettas about the movies operas as movies operas based on movies operetta puppet opera silent films about opera silent films of operas television operas vitaphone opera films voice of firestone worst opera on film worst operetta on film zarzuelas from Introduction

Hollywood Opera

Joseph D. Calver, 2014 While the phenomenon of operatic singing in classical Hollywood cinema is well known the topic has been marginalized in opera film studies of the past twenty five years Indeed the very fact that between 1926 and 1938 all of the Hollywood studios announced plans for full and feature length movie operas has escaped historical notice During the same period various studios experimented with introducing operatic performances in the context of conventional narrative pictures as a means of preparing cinema audiences for fully sung opera on screen Drawing on hundreds of previously unexamined sources this study reveals the full extent of Hollywood's operatic ambitions during the early sound era illuminating a phase of cultural development during which opera in various Hollywood forms reached a wider audience than ever before The dissertation consists of five chapters and an epilogue which proceed in more or less chronological order Chapter 1 traces the early history of American cinema's relationship with opera from the visionary projections of Thomas Edison in the late 1880s through the early years of sound Here I examine the conceptual origins of Hollywood opera and the various technological and aesthetic barriers to the production of full length operas on film Chapter 2 focuses on The Rogue Song 1930 and considers how MGM and various other studios believing American cinema audiences to be unready for fully sung opera on film set about cultivating appreciation for the operatic voice in movies Chapter 3 treats Columbia Pictures One Night of Love 1934 and the ensuing opera boom of 1935-1938 during which Hollywood filmmakers employed opera as a dramatic element in conventional narrative pictures Chapter 4 explores the emergence of imaginary opera custom made opera sequences commissioned by the studios to fulfill specific dramatic needs and as a supplement to the repertoire of well known and popular genuine operatic arias many of which by 1936 had already been filmed Chapter 5 discusses the revival of Hollywood's plans to produce full length movie operas in 1935 and the subsequent abandonment of those plans with the end of the opera boom in February 1938 In an epilogue I briefly survey the continued presence of operatic performances in Hollywood movies 1939-1962 highlighting two films Serenade 1956 and My Geisha 1962 which respectively anticipate the techniques of New Hollywood and art films post 1970

Cinema's Illusions, Opera's Allure

David P. Schroeder, 2020 The allure of opera to cinema early in the century held up through the silent era into sound films through the golden age of movies and into the most recent approaches to cinema This book explores the many different ways that this has happened

Opera on Screen Marcia J. Citron,Professor Marcia J Citron,2000-01-01 The author draws on ideas from diverse fields including media studies and gender studies to examine issues ranging from the relationship between sound and image to the place of the viewer in relation to the spectacle As she raises questions about divisions between high art and popular art and about the tensions between live and reproduced art forms Citron reveals how screen treatments reinforce opera s vitality in a media intensive age

Opera as Soundtrack Jeongwon Joe,2016-05-13 Filmmakers fascination with opera dates back to the silent era but it was not until the late 1980s that critical enquiries into the intersection of opera and cinema began to emerge Jeongwon Joe focusses primarily on the role of opera as soundtrack by exploring the distinct effects opera produces in film effects which differ from other types of soundtrack music such as jazz or symphony These effects are examined from three perspectives peculiar qualities of the operatic voice various properties commonly associated with opera such as excess otherness or death and multifaceted tensions between opera and cinema for instance opera as live embodied high art and cinema as technologically mediated popular entertainment Joe argues that when opera excerpts are employed on soundtracks they tend to appear at critical moments of the film usually associated with the protagonists and the author explores why it is opera not symphony or jazz that accompanies poignant scenes like these Joe s film analysis focuses on the time period of the post 1970s which is distinguished by an increase of opera excerpts on soundtracks to blockbuster titles the commercial recognition of which promoted the production of numerous opera soundtrack CDs in the following years Joe incorporates an empirical methodology by examining primary sources such as production files cue sheets and unpublished interviews with film directors and composers to enhance the traditional hermeneutic approach The films analysed in her book include Woody Allen's Match Point David Cronenberg's M Butterfly and Wong Kar wai's 2046 Opera Mediography, 1993-10-26 Opera Mediography lists operas released as motion pictures both as theatrical feature films on 35mm film and educational films on 16mm film and videorecordings including the VHS videotape format and optical video laser disc though restricted to those that have been released in the United States in the American television standard video called NTSC National Television Standards Committee In addition to all possible information available concerning each opera citations to reviews are included from over twenty two sources ranging from opera journals to video review periodicals to general publications Each review is given a rating based on the mediographer's reading and interpretation of the reviewer's intent This scholarly listing will be of interest to academic and public libraries as well as to individual opera fans Opera on Film, Film in Opera Joe Jeongwon, 2007

Hong Kong Cinema and Sinophone Transnationalisms See Kam Tan, 2021-09-09 Hong Kong Cinema and Sinophone Transnationalisms explores the intricate complexity of selected films and film making practices from 1930s Hong Kong and Shanghai to the later new wave phenomenon of the 1980s The result is a Sinophone cinema that created some very different ways of understanding China and Chineseness developing their own cosmopolitan dreaming within the cultural and economic changes of those times Exploring sinification and its multiple manifestations in film the book examines cinematic genres including Huangmei Opera films qiqing strange or queer romance films fanchuaners professional cross sex performers in film Hong Kong's Bond Movies bangpian erotic fengyue films and New Wave Hong Kong cinema In doing so this book lays fruitful foundations for further understanding the development and changing faces of Hong Kong films and sinophone transnationalism in the even more complex and changing times of today
