Marcel Gerard Comeau

Operation Mercury:

Operation Mercury John Sadler, 2007-07-01 An in depth account of the invasion of Crete by Nazi Germany during World War II the courageous civilian resistance and the Allies devastating defeat Unlike the few other books written on the catastrophic fall of Crete in May 1941 this book concentrates on the military actions between the first German paratroop landing on 20 May and the final defeat and evacuation on 30 May As well as studying the strengths tactics leadership and weapons of both sides the book contains numerous graphic personal anecdotes by participants be they German Allied or Cretan While the battle was a decisive defeat for the Allies the Germans made a disastrous start How they recovered from this so spectacularly is well covered This is a worthy addition to the Battleground series being both a fine study of the conflict and an invaluable guide The author has visited Crete on many occasions and knows the ground well Operation Mercury Tony Simpson, 1981 Operation Mercury Marcel G. Comeau, 1991 Operation Mercury Heinz A. Richter, 2019 Starting from Clausewitz's famous statement that war is the continuation of politics by other means Heinz A Richter's study does not view the Battle of Crete in isolation as a purely military event but as part of the then political and military confrontation between the British world and its allies with the Axis powers Thus as far as the prehistory is concerned the presentation is also a piece of history of diplomacy At the same time the different strategic concepts of the two parties involved are analyzed taking into account the partly divergent internal German plans of the army on the one hand and the navy and air force on the other The operational planning of both sides are discussed in detail Finally the tactical implementation and parallel effects in the Middle East and London are observed in the description of the battle itself Operation Mercury. Self-Inflicted Wound: Allied Defeat In Crete, May 1941 Major Andrew J. Kostic, 2015-11-06 The Germans appeared unstoppable during the early stages of World War II Inexperienced Allied forces were willing to fight but the sentiment was the Germans were too powerful Defeat became a forgone conclusion To defend at all costs no longer appeared viable Withdrawal and evacuation seemed almost commonplace in Allied strategy Great Britain and Germany identified early in the war the strategic importance of the island of Crete for conducting military operations in the Mediterranean Operationally the British maintained naval supremacy in the Mediterranean while the German Luftwaffe ruled the skies The German plan for the occupation of Crete Operation MERCURY called for gliders and Hitler's elite paratroops to conduct the largest airborne operation to date The plan pitted 22 000 men and 1280 aircraft against an erroneously estimated enemy strength of 5 000 men The success of this plan relied upon surprise and the paratroops securing one of the three airfields on the island so reinforcements could be flown in A reluctant Crete Force Commander set the tone for subordinate commanders leadership failures The invasion began the morning of 20 May 1941 The Germans suffered heavy casualties At the end of the first day of fighting they were short ammunition and the Allies maintained control of the airfields However the battalion commander defending the airfield at Maleme lacking communications and situational awareness was unaware of the success of his unit and that night mistakenly ordered its withdrawal from the airfield The Germans occupied the airfield in the morning and reinforcements were flown in The Allies conducted an attack the night of 21 May to retake the airfield but poor Allied leadership at the Brigade and Division level resulted in failure Consequently the Germans were able to mass combat power on the island and defeat the Allies
