investigating the spatial and temporal variability of these processes and 3 examining how rheological variations in the lithosphere control its structural configuration To that end this Thesis provides detailed documentation of faults and volcanoes seamounts at the Mid Atlantic Ridge from 25° 25' N to 27° 10' N and extending from zero age crust at the ridge axis to 29 Ma crust on the ridge flank This information was used to analyze the evolution of ocean crust from initial formation in the rift valley to degradation by aging processes on the ridge flank Accumulation of sediments affects the seafloor morphological expression of ocean crustal structure and sediment thicknesses were also mapped to facilitate study of the morphological record of crustal accretion and tectonism In addition deformation conditions in the lithosphere were analyzed by study of microstructure and geothermometry of abyssal peridotite mylonites recovered from fault zones at slow spreading ridges Ophioliti ,2004 Geological Framework of the Levant Valerii Arkad'evich Krashenninnikov,John Kendrick Hall,2005
