against my own expectations of who I am I was a young helpless romantic tenacious about what I wanted but also a protector by nature It was in the spring of 1977 when I decided to slow down and solidify my life by taking it more seriously I wasn't living up to my potential I was involved in crime and drugs but was finally tired of living a lie I was ready to close the first half of my book about my past to start a new chapter in a new direction With thanks to a neighborhood priest Frank Quinlivan contacted a battered women's shelter the Siena House in Omaha Nebraska on my behalf Sister Beth Daddio was the founder of the Siena House with the help of other nuns My past time have been in writing poetry for the last twenty years I write poetry about the things that matter to me Although writing poetry is a passion I realized that perhaps my book may help others to find the courage to change their direction and still include my poetry The more I wrote the more I tried pulling back especially having been self destructive and irresponsible So it was difficult to write this book But if I could help others to understand how and why they found themselves gravitated into situations with adversity they too can cleanse their thoughts change their direction for a better life helping them would be most gratifying for me
