Pearson, 1972 Conflicting Visions Ryan Touhey, 2015-05-15 In 1974 India shocked the world by detonating a nuclear device In the diplomatic controversy that ensued the Canadian government expressed outrage that India had extracted plutonium from a Canadian reactor donated only for peaceful purposes In the aftermath relations between the two nations cooled considerably As Conflicting Visions reveals Canada and India's relationship was turbulent long before the first bomb blast From the time of India's independence from Britain Ottawa sought to build bridges between Indian and the West through dialogue and foreign aid New Delhi however had a different vision for its future and throughout the Cold War mistrust between the two nations deepened Ryan Touhey draws on archival records personal papers and interviews from Canada India the United States and Britain to trace the breakdown of this complicated bilateral relationship In the process he deepens our understanding of the history of Canadian foreign aid and international relations during the Cold War Canada Today, 1974 Mike Rt. Hon. Lester B. Cold Fire John Boyko, 2016-02-02 Forget all you think you know about the Kennedy years With narrative flair and sparkling storytelling acclaimed historian John Boyko explores the crucial period when America and its allies were fighting the Cold War's most treacherous battles Canadians were trading sovereignty for security and everyone feared a nuclear holocaust At the centre of this story are three leaders President John F Kennedy pledged to pay any price to advance his vision for America's defence and needed Canada to step smartly in line Fighting him at every turn was Conservative prime minister John Diefenbaker an unapologetic nationalist trying to bolster Canada's autonomy Liberal leader Lester Pearson the Nobel Prize winning diplomat sought a middle ground Boyko employs meticulous research and newly released documents to present shocking revelations During the Cuban Missile Crisis Canadian warships guarded America's Atlantic coast and Canada suffered a silent coup d'état Canada was involved in Kennedy's sliding America into Vietnam Kennedy knew the nuclear missiles he was forcing on Canada would be decoys there only to draw Soviet nuclear fire Kennedy's pollster and political adviser travelled to Ottawa under a fake passport to help defeat the Canadian government And perhaps most startlingly if not for Diefenbaker Kennedy may have survived the bullets in Dallas

Campaigns for International Security Douglas Bland, Sean M. Maloney, Queen's University (Kingston, Ont.). School of Policy Studies, 2004 After more than ten years of effort by many states to control and redress conflicts in the Balkans Africa the Middle East and elsewhere Canadian political and military leaders are still struggling to adjust defence policies and to build armed forces relevant to the international security situation Canada faces today But the unending demand of what on the surface seem to be disparate operations and the absence of any overarching description of strategic reality confounds these efforts Policies drawn from theories appropriate to the cold war era and classic peacekeeping missions are out of step with the demands of the past ten years and the future and make it difficult to develop new ways of thinking about defence policy and force development to deal with the world we live in In Campaigns for International Stability the authors see a new pattern emerging from ten years of experience and seemingly different operations The post cold war era has been superseded by the stability campaign a continuous diplomatic and military endeavour by states in various types of coalitions to halt conflicts disarm belligerents and police lawless regions around the world to bring peace order and good government to international affairs Armed force and sometimes deadly force is the central and necessary component of this campaign but what type of force and what type of policies are appropriate to this new era The authors address this question in a discussion of defence policy and management in Canada since 1989 and their relation to the needs of the stability campaign They describe policy making in a Canadian context political and other domestic factors that shape Canada's military capabilities and the influence of the defence budgeting process on policy choices Finally the authors set out a new defence policy framework for rebuilding and transforming both policy and the Canadian Armed Forces over the next ten years to meet the challenges of the stability campaign
