

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

J. K. (Joanne Kathleen) Rowling has written fiction since she was a child and has always aspired to be an author. She started writing the Harry Potter series after the idea occurred to her on a train trip from Manchester to London where she admits Harry "just strolled into my head fully formed." She rushed home to jot down her ideas as soon as the train reached King's Cross station and during the next five years outlined the plots for each of the seven books in the series and began writing the first novel. She often wrote in cafes where Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone was eventually completed. Several publishers rejected the novel, saying it was too long and literary, before the book was finally published in the UK in June 1997. Since then, the Harry Potter books have become a cultural phenomenon and have been translated into many languages.
