students with a comprehensive and in depth exploration of the primary models of couples counseling allowing them to compare and contrast each theory alongside a single case. Designed to be the core text for couple therapy courses, the book begins by introducing the field as well as presenting Carissa and Steve, a couple whom readers will follow as each model is applied to their case. The chapters focus on 11 different theoretical models such as Bowen family systems theory, emotionally focused couple therapy, the Gottman method, solution focused couples counseling, narrative couple therapy, and more, with expert therapists writing on each of these unique models. Each chapter addresses the history of the model, the conceptualization of problem formation, diversity considerations, and the conceptualization of problem resolution. With session transcripts throughout, this book allows training therapists to easily compare, contrast, and apply the most prevalent models in couples counseling. This textbook is a core text for graduate marriage and family therapy, mental health counseling, clinical psychology, and social work students. The book is also useful for practicing professionals who want to explore how to apply a specific model of counseling to couples.

Repairing Intimacy Judith Siegel, 1995-12-01. Couples therapy is greatly enhanced when both the intrapsychic and interpersonal realms can be utilized. Object relations theory allows linkages between the spouses' subjective realities and their relationship in a way that allows the two worlds to be mutually informing. In Repairing Intimacy, the theories of the American object relations theorists are applied to couple dynamics. The representational world is used to explain how primitive defense mechanisms and other intrapsychic phenomena contribute to marital conflict. The structure, function, and content of the representational world all contribute to spousal expectations and the couple's capacity for intimacy. Esteem, soothing, and the propensity of splitting strongly affect the ways in which spouses interact. Projective identifications similarly provide explanations of the couple's interaction, internalized conflicts, and relationships with earlier objects. This book explains how object relations concepts can be used in assessment and in planning treatment goals. Treatment can provide stability or help the couple relate to each other with deepened understanding. Object relations dynamics can help therapists assess which treatment objectives and goals are most applicable to the couples they treat. The beginning and middle phases of couples treatment are given special consideration and include issues such as assessing the couple's commitment to each other and the importance of empathic listening. Other treatment topics include analysis of projective identification and the use of countertransference. Planned and unplanned terminations are also explored. In each treatment section, case material is provided to explicate the therapist's role. The book also examines common therapy issues from an object relations perspective. These include the consequences and advantages of conjoint, concurrent, and collateral treatment approaches. Consideration is also given to the choice of focusing on the couple when the initial presenting problem is the family or an individual. Individual psychotherapy and family therapy can no longer be viewed as competing and disparate treatment approaches. This book creates an integrated approach so that couples can be understood in their totality. A Jason Aronson Book.

Object Relations Therapy of Physical and Sexual Trauma Jill Savege Scharff,David E. Scharff,1994 Rising above the polemics surrounding sexual and physical abuse David and Jill Savege Scharff bring a relational perspective to the integration of psychoanalytic and trauma theories in order to understand the effects of overwhelming physical or psychological trauma including sexual abuse injury and birth defect The Scharffs draw from their object relations therapy with individuals families and couples recovering from trauma an abundance of relevant clinical examples described in their characteristically personal and vivid style Their treatment approach influenced by Fairbairn Klein and Winnicott is respectful of the patient s experience They advise avoiding premature interpretations that impose their own reality on patients because this traumatizes them just as their abuser did In order to work well with these traumatized people the clinician must be able to tolerate ambiguity and sustain longterm therapy for it takes the patience of waiting and wondering to recover deeply repressed memories explore them thoroughly and evaluate their meaning and importance for the patient The Scharffs demonstration of clinical processes helps therapists contain their own countertransference to trauma so as to be fully present with their clients and consistently able to confront abuse patterns in society The object relations approach not only deals with trauma s impact on the individual but views it in its cultural and interpersonal context as well Society alternately emphasizes and ignores trauma so that an encapsulated traumatic experience festers until the next eruption just as dissociative defenses segmentally protect and exaggerate traumatic experience in the individual case The Scharffs review Kramer s Mahlerian approach McDougall s insights into the silence of the psyche and the words of the soma and Anzieu s elaboration of the body ego They resuscitate Freud s seduction hypothesis and the traumatic basis of the repetition compulsion They compare and contrast the concepts of repression and dissociation Moving from there to develop an object relations perspective they draw on Winnicott s concepts of the psychosomatic partnership the environmental and object mothers and the potential space Klein s contributions of the infusion of aggression and death anxiety into developmentally critical relationships Fairbairn s view of the endopsychic situation with reference to his early unpublished papers on childhood sexual abuse that presage his later theory building and their own studies of couple and family dynamics Classical psychoanalysis introduced theories of trauma but later devoted itself to the study of infantile trauma that caused conflict based neurosis rather than actual neurosis Modern trauma theory on dissociative phenomena and post traumatic stress disorder studied after combat the Holocaust and natural disasters comes from the fields of veteran and child developmental psychiatry hypnotism and multiple personality research Trauma theory and psychoanalysis have been on separate tracks Object relations theory offers a bridge between individual and societal experiences of trauma and prepares the way for a less dissociated response to trauma issues among the mental health professions and their psychotherapy literature Relationship Centered Counseling Eugene W.
