make a collection of small word-power pictures such as an alphabet, a house, a mountain and a bird. Begin by showing the illustrations to the children and encouraging them to describe and name them before discovering where these pictures live. Decide that they all live in the house and then the extent of the house in a picture world tree. Place the illustrations into the tree in a visual arrangement such that each will move and explore that the picture pathology is that clear space. Then, drop in little pieces of paper bags, straw, buttons, etc and explore that there is a problem with many of the Earth's natural resources which is getting in and spoiling things. Promote discussion about how this picture affects the house and the people. Ask the children what they can do to help. Write them in the pieces of parchment of the tree and discuss how we could use less paper by thinking of alternatives and how we can recycle what we do use as it doesn't end up in the house.

Provide each child with a large piece of paper. Play music with an animal theme at lower volumes, such as whale songs, therefore allow the children to move in a slow, graceful manner. If a blue mat or piece of fabric is available, encourage children to move the animal movements around the mat. Encourage children to move their bodies gently around the mat, and use simple words, such as 'walk', 'swim', 'wave', 'crawl', 'sway' and 'bounce' on the floor. Promote discussion about how animals move the animals and how we can care for the other creatures by looking after their home. Encourage children to notice how their own 'bounce' is and how happy and healthy the creatures are that live in their environment.

- For a recycling bin in the classroom, have students bring in items of waste to be recycled (plastic), and ask them to place the pieces into the recycling bin after discarding them away. At intervals, empty the recycling bin and look at how much plastic we have used, which might end up in the oceans. Encourage the children to reuse the plastic perhaps by creating models for an ocean scene. Explain that we can then use the plastic again to make new things.
- Provide photos of marine mammals, such as Phoca hispida (Harbor Seal) (see children to print pictures of their favorite animals and then cut them out to create puppets and puppets. They can use these to tell their stories. Provide a large piece of blue fabric for the ocean and invite children to add figures, such as polar bears and seals to create a beautiful ocean scene for their puppets.
- Create a book with used - perhaps in the sand tray or in a large container on the floor. Add a title 'book'. Place lots of items of interest which such as pieces of plastic containers, plastic lids, plastic bottles. Encourage children to have a 'book' about recycling the material from the sand.
