Monasteries Of Ireland:

The Monasteries of Ireland Daphne Desiree Charlotte Pochin Mould,1976     A Monastic Landscape Dr Breda Lynch,2010-11-05 This publication is primarily a study of the various aspects of the use and situation of the land held by the Cistercian order in medieval Leinster A number of key topics form the central elements of this study These include an examination of the physical landscape into which the Cistercian order settled and the changes that occurred within that landscape during the later medieval era The book examines whether the location of the monasteries indicated any underlying nuances or if the monks were happy to settle wherever they were given land The involvement of the Cistercian order in the agricultural and economic life of Leinster is also examined A breakdown of the acreage and land type that the monasteries possessed is presented and in the final section the state of the monasteries immediately prior to the dissolution of the religious houses in the period 1536 41 is determined With regard to this final section the areas of interest are in relation to the physical remains of the monasteries the productivity or otherwise of the associated lands the organisation and location of that land and the general attitude of the Cistercian monks at that particular time in history There are many different areas of study that were examined These include the identification of the lands the land type and trends or differences in this type when compared with other parts of the country The organisation of the land and the uses of it in relation to the monastery are an essential aspect of the work and is possible to identify economic and social change by discussing the uses of that land The identification of granges and grange buildings was not originally intended as part of this work however research has allowed some evidence to emerge in relation to these buildings and is included In relation to the approach a short chapter outlining the origins of monasticism and the emergence of the Cistercian Order is included A brief outline of the governing rules of the Cistercians is included in chapter one as is a short discussion on the spread of the order up to its arrival in Ireland The second chapter is merely intended to give an idea of the pattern of the distribution of the Cistercian monasteries in Ireland Most of the information is in table form giving the monastery its location date of foundation and founder From this a number of observations are be made The principal area of study is Leinster therefore chapter three deals with this territory discussing its boundaries both internal and external and the kingdoms that made up medieval Leinster The fact that the monasteries of Leinster were situated in very well defined territories means that although the study is of Leinster as a whole these smaller somewhat independent units were still an important element in both the landscape and the social framework of the period As such it was necessary to ensure that each of these units was represented in any category of study The location of the monasteries is the focus of the second portion of chapter three Both the natural and man made features of the landscape are examined here The proximity of road and route ways to the monasteries has been mapped and discussed and any trends or patterns commented upon Chapter four deals with the monastic complex and the associated features It discusses the way in which the monastery and its lands were organised and the reasons for this This chapter deals more with the day to day requirements of the monks and indicates how both the land and the buildings within the complex were equally important and key elements in the functioning of the monasteries. Following from chapter four and keeping earlier comments in mind the next portion of the work deals with other land that particular monasteries may have held at any time from foundation up to the time when the extents of the monastic possessions were drawn up. Instead of looking

The Modern

Traveller to the Early Irish Church Kathleen Hughes, Ann Hamlin, 1977 The monastic sites of early Christian Ireland have always been an attraction to visitors. Now issued in a new edition this book is intended for use by those who wish to understand the religious and secular life of early Ireland. The authors have used the site remains and historical source material to reconstruct the life of Irish monks and laymen from the fifth to the twelfth centuries. Here the reader will find treatments of the function of monasteries in early Ireland, the daily life of their inhabitants and the significance of their art and sculpture. The appendices include a county by county guide to the most interesting early Christian sites.

Ireland's Contribution to Early Medieval Culture by way of Hugh Graham is a scholarly exploration that unveils the profound effect of Irish monastic faculties at the cultural landscape of early medieval times. Graham a committed historian delves into

Ireland's rich history to light up the pivotal function played with the aid of these monastic establishments in shaping the intellectual non secular and academic milieu of the era. The book meticulously lines the development of Irish monastic colleges highlighting their precise contributions to early medieval way of life. Graham's studies encompass the religious teachings, scholarly interests and cultural innovations that emerged from those colleges showcasing Ireland's widespread position inside the broader European medieval context. As Graham unfolds the narrative readers are immersed in a global where Irish monastic schools become centers of gaining knowledge of fostering a colourful highbrow culture. The author's meticulous look at sheds light on the scholars manuscripts and academic methods that emanated from these institutions showcasing Ireland's enduring legacy within the nation states of theology literature and training.

Traveling Monastic Paths : Mobility and Religion in Medieval Ireland at Five Early and Late Medieval Irish Monasteries Elise Alonzi, 2018 Mobility is an important aspect of the lives of religious individuals described by medieval texts in early and late medieval Ireland and biogeochemical methods can be used to detect mobility in archaeological populations Stories are recorded of monks and nuns traveling and founding monasteries across Ireland Scotland England Wales and other areas of Europe However these texts rarely address the quotidian lives of average monks and nuns who lived in monastic communities This dissertation seeks to understand if travel was a typical part of the experiences of religious and lay people in early and late medieval Ireland It also aims to increase understanding of how monastic communities related to the local lay communities including addressing if the monastery was populated by those who grew up in the local area Another methodological aim of this dissertation is to advance the field of archaeological biogeochemistry by 1 adding to the bioavailable strontium baseline in Ireland and 2 quantifying the contribution of ocean derived strontium to coastal environments These topics are explored through the biogeochemical analysis of 88 individuals buried at 5 early and late medieval monasteries in Ireland and the analysis of a total of 85 plant samples from four counties in Ireland The three papers in this dissertation present 1 a summary of the mobility of religious and lay people buried at the monasteries Chapter 2 a case study presenting evidence for fosterage of a local child at the early medieval monastery of Illaunloughan Co Kerry Chapter 3 and 3 a study designed to quantify the impact of sea spray on bioavailable strontium in coastal environments Chapter 4 The majority of lay and religious individuals studied were estimated to be local indicating that medieval Irish Christianity was strongly rooted in the local community The study of ocean derived strontium in a coastal environment indicates that sea spray has a non uniform impact on bioavailable strontium in coastal regions These findings shed new light on medieval monastic and lay life in Ireland through the application of biogeochemical methods contributing to the growth of the field of archaeological chemistry in Ireland
