

clearly remember: "I am convincing someone else but now I have to work faster". With assistance from Lauren, the possibility of what I was coming to life via film seemed higher. Lauren helped me with changing little things on the script and I chose the cast for my film after contemplating but even now I still think I did a great job (albeit as casting director).

Following lunch in the Millennium High School auditorium, the groups returned to the classroom both very nervous and excited. Immediately, my teacher assistant on set, Madeline, would be assisting my shoot, pulled my aside to conference on film details. She attentively listened to me and my wants for the film. By the time me and her were done speaking, the camera with tripod were setup. It was finally time to face the music to create my own film with solely a camera and tripod- the magic tools in hand. Originally, in the first scene, my group members, Asia, would walk in as the Director of Photography tracked her moves. Instead, Lauren and Madeline suggested that a pan from the camera would include both characters in the scene therefore eliminating multiple shots- not taken. Taken would increase the much-needed coverage. I thought "why didn't I think of that before?" a cliché statement that started to burn me out. The occurrence of this thought happened frequently, almost every shot we took for the first three scenes.

When I realized that I was still burning myself out, I joined back into the behind the scenes fun Madeline, Lauren, Marquisia, and I were having. We had an awesome time cracking jokes and making crazy faces after the scenes were done. They even said that I was being an easy director not demanding, mean, and demanding enough. But even still, I cracked up confirming that I was also having lots of fun.

My perspective of watching films was taken to a more interesting level as both a worker on my friends' sets and as a director on my own. Watching from behind the scenes was less more interesting because there were lights, wires, people, noise, gels, tiny movie audiences were not able to see. Moreover, what pushed me to Cloud 9 was how so many tools, people, work, and effort had to create someone else's vision. I was beginning to get the big picture of film. Film was like a soaring eagle flying as high as mountain peaks surrounded by a light lit sky where the eagle held its prey, the audience, in its beak. The audience convinced to be engulfed by the eagle, allows itself to be captured by the eagle's thoughts, swimming in his brain.

At this point, the July day camp was almost over as the afternoon of our last day began. Earlier that morning, though, I had finished the remaining, meticulous editing left to do. Now, it was time to show my film. However, an unusual mixture of nervousness, shyness, and anticipation overcame me. Knowing that there were a
