MORPHOLOGY AND CLASSIFICATION OF BACTERIA

1.1 INTRODUCTION

Microorganisms are a heterogeneous group of several distinct classes of living beings. Based on the difference in cellular organization and biochemistry, the kingdom protista has been divided into two groups namely prokaryotes and eukaryotes. Bacteria and blue-green algae are prokaryotes, while fungi, other algae, slime moulds and protozoa are eukaryotes. Bacteria are prokaryotic microorganisms that do not contain chlorophyll. They are unicellular and do not show true branching, except in higher bacteria like actinomycetales.

OBJECTIVES

After reading this lesson, you will be able to:

- describe the structure of Prokaryotic and Eukaryotic cell
- explain the size of bacteria
- classify bacteria based on the shape and arrangements
- describe the structure of bacterial cell wall
- describe the phases of Growth curve
- explain the factors affecting the growth of bacteria

1.2 PROKARYOTES

This catalogue which integrates nearly 35 000 records of benthic marine algae from the Indian Ocean into a taxonomic classification comprising 3 355 specific and infraspecific taxa in 629 genera will greatly facilitate future work in this region. The bibliography of 4 000 references is the largest list of phycological literature ever published. The extensive taxonomic and nomenclatural notes are of paramount importance.

Evolutionary Biogeography of the Marine Algae of the North Atlantic David J. Garbary, G. Robin South, 2013-06-29

Algal systematists, geologists and evolutionary biologists provide a synthesis of the evolutionary biogeography of red, brown and green algae of the North Atlantic Ocean, also considering their relationships with species and genera in the Arctic and Pacific Oceans as well as other subtropical and tropical seas. The history of the Atlantic Basin and its connections to other ocean basins is treated from the geological, paleontological and paleoclimatic perspective. This is contrasted with biogeographic analyses of marine animal systems and the role of plant-animal interactions in evolution. Some of the approaches include traditional systematic studies, cladistic analysis, the experimental evaluation of environment in establishing distribution limits and the application of molecular biology. *Botanica Marina. Sixteenth International Seaweed

Symposium Joanna M. Kain (Jones), Murray T. Brown, Marc Lahaye, 2012-12-06. International Seaweed Symposia have been held at three year intervals for nearly 50 years. In the early days they formed the only international forum for marine phycologists and although there are now frequent phycological meetings their value has not diminished both because of the increased commercial importance of seaweeds and because of the unique mix of disciplines that the meetings attract. Industrialists interact with chemists and biologists with the common aim of understanding seaweeds. The main development during the last few decades has been an increase in the cultivation of algae as natural stocks of the useful species become depleted. Of the first ten Symposia nine were held in western countries where seaweed cultivation is almost non-existent. It is appropriate that the last two have been held where algal exploitation is relatively big business. The popularity of the Symposia with scientists has meant that the standard of presentation has always been high. Many participants from the countries with the highest economic involvement with seaweeds frequently publish in their own languages so their contributions give considerable additional interest to the Proceedings The Philippines with its extensive coastline much of which supports seaweed exploitation and cultivation was an excellent venue for the latest Symposium The papers presented in this volume reflect the continuing world wide interest in marine algae and range from results using cutting edge laboratory techniques to simple but important field observations
