

Unit: Airway Management

Lesson 1: Airway Assessment

Page 1: What You'll Learn

After you finish this lesson, you will be able to:

- * Explain why evaluating the airway is so important.
- * List abnormal airway sounds.
- * Describe how to look, listen, and feel for signs of breathing.

Page 2: Importance of Airway Assessment

In all emergency situations, the first item that must be assessed is the airway. If a patient cannot breathe, a condition known as apnea, all other lifesaving procedures are meaningless because the human body can only survive for a short period of time without oxygen. No matter what the patient condition, the airway must remain patent, or open.

Before you learn how to assess and manage a patient's airway, it is important to understand the key structures of the airway and to review how the respiratory system works.

The primary function of the respiratory system is to bring oxygen into the body and to remove carbon dioxide. Without this systematic exchange of gases, the body cannot survive. The respiratory system uses three key processes to ensure that the exchange of oxygen and carbon dioxide takes place: ventilation, respiration, and oxygenation.

The primary organ of the respiratory system is the lungs. The respiratory system also includes several other structures that form the passages by which air is brought into the body and down to the lungs.
