Multisite Evaluations:

Multisite Evaluations Robin S. Turpin,James M. Sinacore,James Michael Sinacore,1991 Multisite evaluations are conducted for many reasons to increase the option to generalize findings to maximize sample size and to respond to political and social demands However the conduct of these evaluations requires careful consideration The papers in this volume are intended to provide information to evaluators on some of the advantages and limitations and on the organizational methodological and statistical issues implicit in this type of evaluation

Reflections From Four Cases Frances Lawrenz,2011-04-19 Multisite evaluation settings differ from the single settings common to research on evaluation use In addition to the primary intended users there is another important group of potential evaluation users in settings where government agencies or large national or international foundations fund multisite projects project leaders and local evaluators If each project site is expected to take part in or support the overall program evaluation then these individuals frequently serve as links between their projects and the larger cross project evaluation of the funded program The field has not until now address the topic of how being asked or required to participate in such evaluations affects these people who play a critical role in multisite evaluations These issue does so in two ways The first six chapters present data and related analyses from research on four multisite evaluations documenting the patterns of involvement in these evaluation projects and the extent to which different levels of involvement in program evaluations resulted in different patterns of evaluation use and influence The remaining chapters offer reflections on the results of the cases or their implications some by people who were part of the original research and some by those who were not The goal is to encourage readers to think actively about ways to improve multisite evaluation practice This is the 129th volume of the Jossey Bass quarterly report series New Directions for Evaluation an official publication of the American Evaluation Association

interest in multisite evaluation has grown but there is still not a substantial literature on the issues involved in conducting evaluations in multiple sites There are however a number of threads that readers may be interested in pursuing The literature on clinical trials increasingly contains references to conducting multicenter clinical trials Cluster evaluation is an approach to multisite evaluation that has been developed by the W K Kellogg Foundation for improving the evaluation of certain foundation initiatives The studies described in this volume represent an approach to multisite evaluation that has much in common with the clinical trials tradition However it shares with cluster evaluation an appreciation for the adjustments that are necessary to reflect the realities of conducting evaluation research in actual service settings This is the 94th issue of the quarterly report New Directions for Evaluation

Issues in Evaluation: The 20th Anniversary of the Collaboration Between NDE and AEA Sandra Mathison,2007-06-29

This issue of New Directions for Evaluation looks back at the past twenty years of the American Evaluation Association from its inception to current research highlighting important moments and enduring issues in the discipline and profession of evaluation. The issue includes a very brief history of NDE including the journal's purpose, the various foci how the journal has operated and such events as the change in the journal's name. The issue also looks at the substance of NDE over the past twenty years including an analysis of the coverage of cultural diversity issues. But much of the issue is devoted to greatest hits chapters that have appeared in prior NDE issues, each of which is introduced by an analysis of what makes it a significant contribution to the evaluation literature. The American Evaluation Association (AEA) celebrated its twentieth birthday in 2006. The partnership between AEA and New Directions for Evaluation has spanned this time and indeed stretches back further to AEA's precursor associations the Evaluation Research Society and ENet. This is the 114th volume of the quarterly report series New Directions for Evaluation, a publication of Jossey Bass and the American Evaluation Association. Mixed

Methods Alan Bryman,2006-08-07 Mixed methods is one of the major areas of growth in social research methodology. Much of the literature on mixed methods research is widely dispersed across a variety of journals and other publications, resulting in much of it being inaccessible. This volume brings together the key articles in this important field. Advances in Survey Research Marc T. Braverman,Jana Kay Slater,1996 This volume of New Directions for Evaluation focuses on recent lines of theory and research related to survey design, implementation, analysis and interpretation. The volume also includes an analysis of how surveys can be used to involve the public in program and policy evaluation. All survey modes mail, telephone and personal interview are discussed. Our intent is to help evaluators improve the quality of surveys they conduct and to stimulate evaluators to use surveys in new contexts. The Education Index ,1991 Environmental Program and Policy Evaluation: Addressing Methodological Challenges Matthew Birnbaum,Per Mickwitz,2009-07-14

Although environmental policy and program evaluation emerged rather late compared to many other areas of public policy, an energetic evaluation community in the environmental field has emerged during the last decade. This is a community of evaluators with diverse backgrounds in environmental sciences, social sciences and general evaluation. Evaluation in the environmental field is characterized by complex policies and programs around wicked problems. They exist within complex systems composed of interacting environmental and socioeconomic systems. In furthering the state of evaluation in the environmental field, this issue focuses on key methodological challenges, time horizons, scaling, data credibility, research designs and counterfactuals. Contributors look at each challenge with two chapters to enhance a pluralistic discourse for development of the theory and practice of environmental evaluation. The authors from Australia, Europe and North America represent the diversity of the community with respect to their formal training personal experiences and institutional affiliations The issue concludes with two commentaries reflecting on the discussions in relation to that of contemporary evaluation in general and a summary of the insights for the future of environmental evaluation These chapters cumulatively hold promise for furthering the quality of evaluations not only in the environmental field but in other fields as well This is the 122nd volume of the Jossey Bass quarterly report series New Directions for Evaluation an official publication of the American Evaluation Association
