New Rubian Writing Womens View:

Krishna Sobti's Views on Literature and the Poetics of Writing Rosine-Alice Vuille, 2022-10-03 How does a writer discuss her creative process and her views on a writer's role in society? How do her comments on writing relate to her works? The Hindi writer Krishna Sobti (1925-2019) is known primarily as a novelist. However, she also extensively wrote about her views on the creative process, the figure of the writer, historical writing, and the position of writers within the public sphere. This study is the first to examine in detail the relationship between Sobti's views on poetics as exposed in her non-fictional texts and her own literary practice. The writer's self-representation is analysed through her use of metaphors to explain her creative process. Sobti's construction of the figure of the writer is then put in parallel with her idiosyncratic use of language as a representation of the heterogeneous voices of her characters and with her conception of literature as a space where time and memory can be held. At the same time, by delving into Sobti's position in the debate around women's writing, especially through the creation of a male double, the failed writer Hashmat, and into her views on literature and politics, this book also reflects on the literary debates of the post-Independence Hindi literary sphere. Lee Smith, Annie Dillard, and the Hollins Group

Louisiana State University Press, 1999-09 This work examines the history of Hollins College, which by the 1950s had set itself up as a school with a significant women's writing programme. It examines the influence of the mentors in the 1960s and the writers themselves, such as Lee Smith and Annie Dillard.

Feminism and Modernity in Anglophone African Women's Writing Dobrota Pucherová, 2022-07-29 This book re-reads the last 60 years of Anglophone African women's writing from a transnational and trans-historical feminist perspective rather than postcolonial, from which these texts have been traditionally interpreted. Such a comparative frame throws into relief patterns across time and space that make it possible to situate this writing as an integral part of women's literary history. Revisiting this literature in a comparative context with Western women writers since the 18th century, the author highlights how invocations of tradition have been used by patriarchy everywhere to subjugate women. The similarities between women's struggles worldwide and the feminist imagination it produced. The author argues that in the 21st century African feminism has undergone a major epistemic shift from a culturally exclusive to a relational feminism that conceptualizes African femininity through the risky opening of oneself to otherness, transculturation, and translation. Like Western feminists in the 1960s, contemporary African women writers are turning their attention to the female body as the prime site of women's oppression and freedom, reframing feminism as a demand for universal human rights and actively shaping global discourses on gender, modernity, and democracy. The book will be of interest to students and researchers of African literature but also feminist literary scholars and comparatists more generally.

When Women Ask the Questions Marilyn J. Boxer, 1998 Twenty-five years after establishment of the first women's studies program, Marilyn Boxer says the time has come to assess where we have been and where we are going. Boxer traces the progress of women's studies, its impact on the world of higher education, and concludes that the rise of women's studies has challenged the university in the same way that feminism has challenged society at large

Feminist Collections, 2004 An Introduction to Women's Writing Marion Shaw, 1998 This volume is a survey of writing by women from the Middle Ages to the late 1990's. It comprises nine essays by women scholars who are experts in a particular period of literary history and who have an interest in feminist criticism. The book also establishes characteristics belonging to each period and also suggests ways in which continuities and developments have emerged. Although this text is informed by feminist criticism, it is also designed to be accessible to readers unacquainted with feminist literary theory and caters to both a general and an undergraduate readership.
