

"They turned it into a desert and called it peace."

—Tacitus, describing the Roman Empire.

Analyzing the NATO bombing, Noam Chomsky challenges the New Humanism: Is it guided by power interests, or by humanitarian concern? Is the resort to force undertaken in the name of principles and values? Or are we witnessing something more grim and familiar?

With a powerful grasp of history—and an incisive argument about its relevance in this "new era"—Chomsky peels back historical claims that the United States and its allies fight for a world where those responsible for ethnic cleansing have nowhere to hide.

The New Military Humanism reveals instead a world where victims of human rights violations are either worthy or unworthy. In the case of Turkey, its Kurdish victims of ethnic cleansing are so unworthy that we sell arms to our paying ally to help it accomplish the task. Meanwhile, Serbia, a disorderly miscreant impeding the institution of the U.S.-dominated global system, is the target of impassioned arguments — and bombs — that the UN Declaration on Human Rights must be enforced.

Chomsky seeks to overcome what George Orwell called a sinister, largely voluntary form of literary censorship by the well-educated with the "general tacit agreement that 'it wouldn't do' to mention that particular fact."

With his uniquely powerful style, Chomsky reviews the many facts that just won't do. From administrative knowledge that bombing would escalate Serb atrocities, to the opportunities for diplomacy passed over in favor of war, the facts are so numerous as to warrant a chapter on the "blatant syndrome": an affliction necessary to hold the official version of reality in place.

"A persuasively argued critique...of NATO's disastrous Kosovo action. [It] reveals...intentionally bad logic, catastrophically infamous results, and frightening power allied with both violence and catatony...a rare no responsible citizen should avoid confronting. Indispensable."

—Edward W. Said

"A brilliant dissection of the US/NATO evasion of diplomacy...An eye-opener and essential work."

—Edward S. Herman

The New Military Humanism Noam Chomsky, 1999 Analyzing the NATO bombing Noam Chomsky challenges the New Humanism With a powerful grasp of history and an incisive argument about its relevance in this new era Chomsky peels back rhetorical claims that the United States and its allies fight for a world where those responsible for ethnic cleansing have nowhere to hide With his uniquely powerful style Chomsky reviews the many facts that just won't do From administration knowledge that bombing would escalate Serb atrocities to the opportunities for diplomacy passed over in favor of war the facts are so numerous as to warrant a chapter on the denial syndrome an affliction necessary to hold the official version of reality in place

Challenges for Humanitarian Intervention C. A. J. Coady, Ned Dobos, Sagar Sanyal, 2018-05-10 Ten new essays critique the practice armed humanitarian intervention and the Responsibility to Protect doctrine that advocates its use under certain circumstances The contributors investigate the causes and consequences as well as the uses and abuses of armed humanitarian intervention One enduring concern is that such interventions are liable to be employed as a foreign policy instrument by powerful states pursuing geo political interests Some of the chapters interrogate how the presence of ulterior motives impact on the moral credentials of armed humanitarian intervention Others shine a light on the potential adverse effects of such interventions even where they are motivated primarily by humanitarian concern The volume also tracks the evolution of the R2P norm and draws attention to how it has evolved for better or for worse since UN member states unanimously accepted it over a decade ago In some respects the norm has been distorted to yield prescriptions and to impose constraints fundamentally at odds with the spirit of the R2P idea This gives us all the more reason to be cautious of unwarranted optimism about humanitarian intervention and the Responsibility to Protect

The Military Enlightenment Christy L. Pichichero, 2017-11-15 The Military Enlightenment brings to light a radically new narrative both on the Enlightenment and the French armed forces from Louis XIV to Napoleon Christy Pichichero makes a striking discovery the Geneva Conventions post traumatic stress disorder the military band of brothers and soldierly heroism all found their antecedents in the eighteenth century French armed forces Readers of The Military Enlightenment will be startled to learn of the many ways in which French military officers administrators and medical personnel advanced ideas of human and political rights military psychology and social justice
