New Rhetoric And The Humanities Essays On Rhetoric And Its Applications:

The New Rhetoric and the Humanities Ch. Perelman, 2012-12-06 Modern logic has undergone some remarkable developments in the last hundred years. These have contributed to the extraordinary use of formal logic which has become essentially the concern of mathematicians. This has led to attempts to identify logic with formal logic. The claim has even been made that all non-formal reasoning to the extent that it cannot be formalized no longer belongs to logic. This conception leads to a genuine impoverishment of logic as well as to a narrow conception of reason. It means that as soon as demonstrative proofs are no longer available, reason will no longer dominate. Even the idea of the reasonable becomes foreign to logic and such expressions as reasonable decisions, reasonable choice or reasonable hypotheses would be put aside as meaningless. The domain of action including methodology and everything that is given over to deliberation or controversy is foreign to formal logic. It would become a battleground where necessarily the reason of the strongest would always prevail. The New Rhetoric and the Humanities Chaïm Perelman, 1979

The New Rhetoric and the Humanities. Essays on Rhetoric and Its Applications. With an Introduction by Harold Zyskind Chaïm Perelman, William Kluback, 1979 Arts & Humanities Citation Index, 1996

The New Rhetoric Chaïm Perelman, L. Olbrechts-Tyteca, 1991-09-30 The New Rhetoric is founded on the idea that since argumentation aims at securing the adherence of those to whom it is addressed, it is in its entirety relative to the audience to be influenced, says Chaïm Perelman and L. Olbrechts-Tyteca, and they rely in particular for their theory of argumentation on the twin concepts of universal and particular audiences. While every argument is directed to a specific individual or group, the orator decides what information and what approaches will achieve the greatest adherence according to an ideal audience. This ideal, Perelman explains, can be embodied for example in God in all reasonable and competent men, in the man deliberating or in an elite. Like particular audiences, then, the universal audience is never fixed or absolute but depends on the orator, the content and goals of the argument and the particular audience to whom the argument is addressed. These considerations determine what information constitutes facts and reasonableness and thus help to determine the universal audience that in turn shapes the orator's approach. The adherence of an audience is also determined by the orator's use of values, a further key concept of the New Rhetoric. Perelman's treatment of value and his view of epideictic rhetoric sets his approach apart from that of the ancients and of Aristotle. In particular, Aristotle's division of rhetoric into three genres: forensic, deliberative and epideictic, is largely motivated by the judgments required for each. Forensic or legal arguments require verdicts on past action; deliberative or political rhetoric seeks judgment on future action; and epideictic or ceremonial rhetoric concerns values associated with praise or blame and seeks no specific decisions. For Aristotle, the epideictic genre was of limited importance in the civic realm since it did not concern facts or policies. Perelman, in contrast, believes not only that epideictic rhetoric warrants more attention but that the values normally limited to that genre are in fact central to all argumentation. Epideictic oratory, Perelman argues, has significant and important argumentation for strengthening the disposition toward action by increasing adherence to the values it lauds These values are central to the persuasiveness of arguments in all rhetorical genres since the orator always attempts to establish a sense of communion centered around particular values recognized by the audience The Promise of Reason John T.

Knape, 2012-12-19 The goal of this book is to formulate a modern theoretical approach for rhetorical studies in a variety of disciplines in the humanities media research and other cultural studies The discipline of rhetoric originally concerned itself with linguistic forms of communication and its basic theory was developed with such cases in mind With respect to this ancient tradition there are numerous books that provide a historical overview of the field There is also a wide array of introductory works and research contributions that deal with the practice of political rhetoric On the other hand only a few 20th century academics have attempted to theoretically rehabilitate rhetoric after its decline as an academic discipline in Europe in the 18th and 19th centuries and to give rhetorical theory a modern new and further reaching perspective Two notable examples have been Kenneth Burke and Brian Vickers The book begins with the assumption that rhetoric is not merely limited to linguistic action but rather is present everywhere in the communicative world Against this background this
