New Service Development Gary R. Schirr,2008 Product Development For The Service Sector Robert G. Cooper,Scott J. Edgett,1999-10-22 As the lines between products and services become less and less distinct many managers and consultants advocate that manufacturing companies learn to think like the service sector get close to the customer offer multi dimensional solutions provide high quality support But in today s highly competitive and constantly changing marketplace managers in service industries such as banking insurance financial services utilities and retailing can benefit enormously by thinking like manufacturers employing a rigorous product development model to create and test new offerings develop the most promising ones and see them to market successfully In Product Development for the Service Sector product development experts Cooper and Edgett draw from their extensive research teaching and consulting experience to offer service sector executives and managers a comprehensive overview of the principles of product development and how they can be successfully applied in any service industry The Process of New Service Development W. Dolsma,2015 Services form an important part of the economy today Innovation for service firms is as important as for manufacturing but the innovation process for service firms is comparatively little studied In this paper I review the literature there is on the innovation process for service firms and make two suggestions for formalizing that process The common thought that service firms do not innovate does not hold Innovation is however often ad hoc for services and it can therefore be difficult to measure firms innovation efforts These points are all related to issues of appropriability of the benefits of innovation in services The two issues primarily discussed in this paper the possibilities of formalizing and appropriating in case of NSD are central for issues for service firms It is here that this paper offers some contributions to the existing literature it does not so much present an overview thereof

New Service Development and Innovation in the New Economy Bo Edvardsson,Anders Gustafsson,Michael David Johnson,Bodil Sandén,2002 This book focuses on one of the key issues in the management of a modern firm the introduction and development of new competitive services The book combines both theoretical and applied approaches Also incorporates a number of case studies from a wide range of companies aimed to illustrate various aspects of the design and improvement of new services New Service Development Fausto Garcia,2010-11 The study covers two main issues the role of Innovation within Service Firms and the topic of firms delivering experiential content as a major part of their offer The focus was centred on the study of New Service Development NSD processes with an Operations Management perspective Empirical information about the use of NSD in service firms was collected so as to understand whether and how standard methodologies for NSD are applied in firms where innovation is a strategic priority For solving the problems presented by environmental challenges and heterogeneity that distinguish the service sector the focus was placed just on a particular type of service firms Experience Based Services that aim to deliver services with high experience content as a central part of their outcome The objective was to better understand how to help these firms to innovate in order to follow the trends of the so called Experience Economy Two sectors have been selected to achieve the research objectives the Theme Park Destination Industry and Commercial Centers The last stage of the study aims to outline a comprehensive model for service innovation decisions Innovation with Services ,2013 Ordnance

,1924 Army Ordnance ,1924 Sectoral Heterogeneity in New Service Development Sabine Kuester,Monika Schuhmacher,Barbara Broermann,Andreas Worgul,2016 The service industry is of fundamental relevance for the economies of industrialized countries as the service industry produces the highest growth in the gross domestic product In this regard new service development NSD represents a critical resource for competitive survival and a decisive factor of growth in the service industry However service firms across many industries are increasingly faced with the challenge of determining how best to manage their development of new service offerings Although researchers have shown growing interest in NSD issues this area is still underutilized Furthermore although the heterogeneity of the service industry has been emphasized for years the current body of research on NSD mainly focuses on specific service environments providing data that are often not comparable across different service sectors Additionally there is no study to date that comprehensively examines innovation activities and the relevance of service innovations success factors within different service industries The aim of this exploratory study is to establish a more balanced picture of the nature of innovation activities in terms of NSD characteristics and success factors in the heterogeneous service industry From this perspective this paper begins with an examination of the factors that contribute to the success of NSD Based on a meta analysis of new service success factor studies 17 different success determinants are classified and aggregated to service related success determinants Subsequently a cluster analysis of 1016 service companies is used to identify different service innovation types For the service sector four service innovation types are determined efficient developers innovative developers interactive adopters and standardized adopters Furthermore based on interviews with service innovation managers the previously identified success factors are examined for each innovation type using a standardized survey Finally based on the results of this exploratory study the paper concludes with recommendations for NSD management and research propositions for each service innovation type These propositions support innovation managers to successfully manage service innovations for the innovation type they are operating in
