Other Colours:

Wittgensteins Remarks on Colour Andrew Lugg, 2021-02-17 The book is a first detailed discussion of Ludwig Wittgenstein's Remarks on Colour a compilation of writings on the subject from the last fifteen months of his life The origin and significance of the remarks are explained along with a remark by remark guide to what Wittgenstein says In addition to serving as an account of the thought recorded in the text the book provides an interpretation of Wittgenstein's treatment of colour concepts and an account of his distinctive philosophical style Remarks on Colour is shown to be a good way into the philosophy to reveal a great deal about how Wittgenstein approaches philosophy and to bring out features of his thought elided if not missed by more general studies especially those that focus on more finished work Impossible Colours:

Colour Experience, Vision Science, and the Philosophy of Perception Michael Newall, 2026-01-01 This book is about impossible colours Impossible colours earn their name because they are forbidden by opponent processing the orthodox scientific account of how the visual system encodes colour Yet there are good reasons to think we can and do see such colours This book investigates two different kinds of impossible colours First there are reddish greens and yellowish blues which are often thought to be impossible to see or even conceive A range of evidence is given here that shows this to be false including colour figures that might allow the reader to see these colours themselves The second kind of impossible colour is entirely familiar indeed mundane and includes colours such as orange purple and brown The book assembles evidence showing that these colours are experienced as phenomenologically elementary a fact that contradicts opponent processing theory This book also provides a new account of colour experience to which these two kinds of colours provide the keys and explores the deep implications for scientific and philosophical thinking which follow For science impossible colours call into question the opponent process theory For philosophy they give new perspectives on long contested questions Are colours characteristics of the external world which our visual systems grant us direct experiential access to Or are they generated in some way by the visual system an illusion we project onto the external world Colour Measurement and Mixture Sir
