

The background of the book cover is a complex, abstract geometric composition. It features numerous overlapping triangles in various colors, including shades of orange, yellow, red, and grey. In the lower right foreground, a person's hand is visible, holding a violin and bow, which are rendered in a more realistic, though still stylized, manner compared to the background.

The performance was the Metropolitan Opera Company's first world premiere by any composer. By all accounts the premiere was an unambiguous success and the event itself recognized as a major moment in New York cultural history. The initial public opinion matched Puccini's own evaluation of his opera. He called it the best he had ever written and expected it to become as popular as La Bohème. Yet the music reviews tell a different story. Marked by ambivalence the reviews expose the New York City critics' struggle to reconcile the opera they expected to see with the one they actually saw and the opera itself became embroiled in controversy over the essence of musical Americanness and the nativist perception that a uniquely American national opera tradition continued to elude both American and foreign born opera composers. This book seeks to account for the differences between Puccini's own assessments of the opera and those of its first audience. Offering transcriptions of the central reviews and of letters unavailable elsewhere the book provides a historically informed understanding of La fanciulla del West and the reception of this European work as it intersected with both opera production and consumption in the United States and with the process of American musical identity formation during the very period that Americans actively sought to eradicate European cultural influences. As such it offers a window into the development of nativism and cosmopolitan nationalism in New York City's musical life during the first decade of the twentieth century. More Chapters of Opera; Being Historical and Critical Observations and Records Concerning the Lyric Drama in New York from 1908 to 1918, by Henry Edward Krehbiel ... with Illustrations and Tables of Performances Within the Period Described
