Henson,Andrew C. Lee,1998-03-31 In the past ten years full scale simulation training has become dramatically more evident in undergraduate and graduate medical education This increase has been due primarily to two factors the development of new computer driven technology and an interest in simulation specific training techniques Technologically simulators have evolved from simple anatomical reproductions to full scale accurate reproductions of anatomy and physiology powered by multiple computers High technology simulation centers run by teams of faculty are emerging as integral tools in fulfilling medical centers educational missions In addition educational techniques specific to simulation which have been developed and used by other industries for over half a century are being applied to medical training Aviation and aerospace have used sophisticated simulation since the 1950s to train pilots and astronauts Extrapolating these methods for use in the medical world has been a natural course of events particularly in specialties that require some of the same basic thought processes and interactions required of the pilot or astronaut. It is not surprising then that anesthesiology would be the medical specialty to take the lead in adding simulation training to its educational programs. The anesthesiologist's job in the operating room is similar to that of a pilot in a cockpit not in the specific tasks but in decision making technological and human interfaces and crisis management. Western Hospital and Nurses Review, 1929

Advancing Nursing Practice in

Pain Management Eloise Carr, Mandy Layzell, Martin Christensen, 2010-02-22. This book showcases the development and evaluation of innovative examples of pain management initiatives by advanced practitioners. It considers each service development or community initiative both in terms of advanced practice nursing and pain management. There is a wide range of examples of innovation in pain management included from the introduction of ketamine use in one trust to wider issues around meeting the needs of pain management in the community. The book considers issues including use of research education and interprofessional working in the advanced practitioner role. Each chapter looks at development of the service challenges of implementation evaluation of the service's success and justifying the importance of the advanced nurse in the service's achievements. Underlying theory is considered but the focus of each chapter is the translation of knowledge and skills into practice. Written by expert advanced nurse practitioners with a wealth of experience in pain management. Explores pain management in primary and secondary care both within and outside the NHS. Suitable for qualified nurses Nurse Practitioners specialist nurses working in the pain field and nursing students on postgraduate courses on pain management.

The American Journal of Surgery, 1914. Includes the papers and or proceedings of various surgical associations.
