

Hi.

I'm trying to gather my thoughts into something coherent, but right now my mind is just a jumble. A chaotic jumble. At all the times I kept thinking about what to do and what to do for a chance to get to talk to you this week. All the times I was thinking about reaching out to you only for it to fall through. I almost stopped thinking it could ever happen after 20 years of having the conversation and then you called me. That that's all in the past now I've been working with you at your intervals and now I've found out that this is really happening. I really got to say those words.

All of the music I've ever made... now belongs... to me.

And all my music ideas.
All the different things.
The album art and photography.
The unreleased songs.
The memories. The magic. The madness.
Every single one.
My entire life's work.

To say this is my greatest dream come true is actually being pretty reserved about it. To my friends you know how important this has been to me - so much so that I'm particularly re-released and released it at my album calling them Taylor's Version. The passionate support you showed these albums and the amount of things you would have done for me is why I was able to say those words. I can't thank you enough for helping to realize me with this art that I have dedicated my life to but have never shared with you.

All I've ever wanted was the opportunity to work hard enough to be able to one day purchase my music outright with no strings attached no partnership with the company. I will be forever grateful to everyone at Universal Capital for being the first people to ever offer this to me. And now they've reached every interaction we've had has been honest, fair, and respectful. This was a business deal to them, but I really felt like they saw it for what it was to me. My memories and my music and my heart and my heart and my heart and my heart. I am extremely thankful. My first letter might just be a long message in the future of my future.

I know I know what about Rap. Tell all transparency. I haven't even re-released a portion of it. The Reputation album was so specific to that time in my life, and I kept hitting a stopping point when I tried to release it. All that distance that longed to be understood while feeling completely misunderstood. That desperate hope that someone would and would be to be perfectly honest, it's the one album in those first 10 that I thought couldn't be improved upon by adding it. But the music is perfect, is it? So I kept putting it off. There will be a time (if you're into the idea) for the unreleased that tracks from that album to include. I'm already completely re-released my entire debut album and I really love how it sounds now. These 2 albums can still have their moments to re-emerge when the time is right. It's that could be something you guys could be excited about. But it is happening. It won't be from a place of sadness and longing for what I wish I could have. It will just be a celebration now.

I'm extremely heartened by the conversations this stage has reignited within my industry among artists and fans. Every time a new artist tells me they motivated to run their music business in their own way, that's because of this. Right. I'm motivated to be important to me for all of this to happen. Thank you for being honest about something that used to be thought of as the industry's secret for much of the time. You'll never know how much it means to me that you would share every single bit of it. It's a secret and it's up there.

Thanks to you and your incredible teamwork and arrangement. The best thing that has ever been done. Finally actually are.

Thanked and amazed.

Taylor
