Flexibility and Commitment in Planning D. Thomas, M. Tvrđý, 2012-12-06 This book is about the ways in which two western European countries attempt to cope with the changing demands of urban development In particular it is concerned with the differences in approach of the Dutch and English planning systems and the contrasting ways in which they are used to guide promote and control development The book results from a research study in which members of staff at Delft of Technology and Oxford Polytechnic compared local planning and University development in the Netherlands and England The aim was to investigate ways in which development was promoted and controlled under different planning systems The research was subsequently developed along two converging lines One was an examination of over twenty case studies of plan making and the control of development in the cities of Leiden and Oxford The other was a study of the two planning systems and the ways in which the respective approaches to planning were seen to relate closely to the contrasting legal and administrative systems and differences in development practice The convergence of the two lines of enquiry produced a tension between empirical observations and theoretical supposition which led to a fruitful development of ideas about the nature of the two planning systems and how they promote and control development Oxfordshire Nikolaus

Pevsner, Jennifer Sherwood, 1996-03-01 Oxford's unique collection of university and college buildings both old and new form a major part of this book The city itself with its medieval walls and castle and ancient churches is also fully described Among the county's distinguished houses are Vanbrugh's Blenheim and Kent's Rousham Park each in magnificently landscaped grounds while village churches range from notable Norman examples such as Iffley to G E Street's inventive Victorian creations such as St Simon St Jude at Shipton under Wychwood Other attractive towns in this still strongly rural county vary from stone built Chipping Norton in the Cotswolds to brick built Henley on the Thames Man-Made Future Iain Boyd

Whyte, 2006-12-19 This anthology of essays by a group of distinguished scholars investigates post 1945 city planning in Britain not from a technical viewpoint but as a polemical visual and educational phenomenon shifting the focus of scholarly interest towards the often neglected emotional and aesthetic aspects of post war planning Each essay is grounded in original archival research and sheds new light on this critical era in the development of modern town planning This collection is a valuable resource for architectural social and urban historians as well as students and researchers offering new insights into the development of the mid twentieth century city Cowley Road Annie Skinner, 2005 A history of the development of

Oxford's Cowley Road from a respectable white working class suburb into today's multicultural and bohemian urban landscape Rethinking Civic Participation in Democratic Theory and Practice Rod Dacombe, 2017-11-27 This book makes an important contribution to contemporary debates over the place of civic participation in democratic theory and practice Drawing on a detailed case study of the Blackbird Leys area of Oxford the book employs a novel empirical approach to ask whether widespread participation in civic life can enhance the prospects for democracy given the low levels of participation which tend to exist in deprived areas Throughout it presents an account of participation rooted in the history and development of the case in order to avoid the kinds of abstraction which are characteristic of many existing studies in the area The book will appeal to scholars working on democratic theory in applied settings and will be of interest to anyone concerned with inequalities in civic participation

Alternative Visions of Post-War Reconstruction John

Pendlebury, Erdem Erten, Larkham Peter, 2014-08-19 The history of post Second World War reconstruction has recently become an important field of research around the world Alternative Visions of Post War Reconstruction is a provocative work that questions the orthodoxies of twentieth century design history This book provides a key critical statement on mid twentieth century urban design and city planning focused principally upon the period between the start of the Second World War to the mid sixties The various figures and currents covered here represent a largely overlooked field within the history of 20th century urbanism In this period while certain modernist practices assumed an institutional role for post war reconstruction and flourished into the mainstream such practices also faced opposition and criticism leading to the production of alternative visions and strategies Spanning from a historically informed modernism to the increasing presence of urban conservation the contributors examine these alternative approaches to the city and its architecture
