Youth Programs as Builders of Social Capital Matthew Calvert, Mary Emery, Sharon Kinsey, 2013-08-07 This volume builds understanding of practices in youth and community development that create or build social capital assets at the individual group and community levels The authors explore whether programs contribute to the development of social capital at the individual and community scales thereby fostering and enhancing positive youth development as well as community development It includes articles on defining and measuring social capital through instruments designed to document impact and also to engage program participants The authors then discuss program practices that build social capital in a wide range of youth development settings from community based service learning to 4 H community clubs Finally they focus on building social capital in particular contexts including work in rural communities with the most vulnerable youth The volume is designed to help practitioners Refine their dual focus on youth and community development Clarify constructs that help translate the public value of positive youth development to community stakeholders Provide examples of practices that link youth and youth programs more intentionally to the social relationships that knit communities together This is the 138th volume of New Directions for Youth Development the Jossey Bass quarterly report series dedicated to bringing together everyone concerned with helping young people including scholars practitioners and people from different disciplines and professions

Social Capital at the Community Level John M. Halstead, Steven C. Deller, 2015-04-24 In Social Capital at the Community Level John Halstead and Steven Deller examine social capital formation beyond the individual level through a variety of disciplines planning economics regional development sociology as well as non traditional approaches like engineering and built environmental features The notion of social capital in community and economic development has become a focus of intense interest for policy makers practitioners and academics The notion is that communities with higher levels of social capital networks trust and norms will prosper both economically and socially In a practical sense how do communities use the notion of social capital to build policies and strategies to move their community forward Are all forms of social capital the same and do all have a positive influence on the community To help gain insights into these fundamental questions Social Capital at the Community Level takes a holistic interdisciplinary or systems approach to thinking about the community While those who study social capital will acknowledge the need for an interdisciplinary approach most stay within their disciplinary silos One could say there is strong bonding social capital within disciplines but little bridging social capital across disciplines The contributors to Social Capital at the Community Level have made an attempt to build that bridging social capital While disciplinary biases and research approaches are evident there is significant overlap about how people with different disciplinary perspectives think about social capital and how it can be applied at the community level This can be from neighborhoods addressing a localized issue to a global response to a natural disaster This book is an invaluable resource for scholars researchers and policy makers of community and economic development as well as rural sociologists and planners looking to understand the opaque process of social capital formation in communities Rural Communities Cornelia Butler Flora, 2018-03-05

Communities in rural America are a complex mixture of peoples and cultures ranging from miners who have been laid off in West Virginia to Laotian immigrants relocating in Kansas to work at a beef processing plant to entrepreneurs drawing up plans for a world class ski resort in California's Sierra Nevada Rural Communities Legacy and Change uses its unique Community Capitals framework to examine how America's diverse rural communities use their various capitals natural cultural human social political financial and built to address the modern challenges that face them Each chapter opens with a case study of a community facing a particular challenge and is followed by a comprehensive discussion of sociological concepts to be applied to understanding the case This narrative topical approach makes the book accessible and engaging for undergraduate students while its integrative approach provides them with a framework for understanding rural society based on the concepts and explanations of social science This fifth edition is updated throughout with 2013 census data and features new and expanded coverage of health and health care food systems and alternatives the effects of neoliberalism and globalization on rural communities as well as an expanded resource and activity section at the end of each chapter The SAGE

Handbook of Measurement Geoffrey Walford, Eric Tucker, Madhu Viswanathan, 2010-04-14 The Sage Handbook of Measurement is a unique methodological resource in which Walford Viswanathan and Tucker draw together contributions from leading scholars in the social sciences each of whom has played an important role in advancing the study of measurement over the past 25 years Each of the contributors offers insights into particular measurement related challenges they have confronted and how they have addressed these Each chapter focuses on a different aspect of measurement so that the handbook as a whole covers the full spectrum of core issues related to design method and analysis within measurement studies The book emphasises issues such as indicator generation and modification the nature and conceptual meaning of measurement error and the day to day processes involved in developing and using measures The Handbook covers the full range of disciplines where measurement studies are common policy studies education studies health studies and business studies

Global Markets and Local Crafts Frederick F. Wherry, 2008-02-25 Today it is not uncommon to find items in department stores that are hand crafted in countries like Thailand and Costa Rica These traditional crafts now make up an important part of a global market They support local and sometimes national economies and help create and solidify cultural identity But these crafts are not necessarily indigenous Whereas Thailand markets crafts with a long history and cultural legacy Costa Rica has created a local handicraft tradition where none was known to exist previously In Global Markets and Local Crafts Frederick F Wherry compares the handicraft industries of Thailand and Costa Rica to show how local cultural industries break into global markets and conversely how global markets affect the ways in which artisans understand adapt and utilize their cultural traditions Wherry develops a new framework for studying globalization by considering the phenomenon from the perspective of the supplier instead of the market Drawing from interviews and extensive fieldwork shadowing artisans and exporters in their daily dealings Wherry offers a rare account of globalization in motion and what happens when market negotiations do not proceed as planned Considering economic and political forces flows of people and materials and frames that define cultural and market situations as they play out in the artisan communities of these two countries Wherry uncovers how authentic folk tradition is capitalized or created

Social Capital Gregory Tripp, Michael Payne, 2009 Social capital may be defined as social networks the norms of reciprocity and trust that arise from them and the application of these assets in achieving mutual objectives Social capital is quite important for the efficient performance of modern economies and for the development of a stable liberal democracy The creation of networks and trust ideas central to mainstream thinking about social capital seem to be fundamental in allowing change to occur smoothly This book proposes certain designs that appear to encourage the social interactions of sense of belonging that lie at the heart of the idea about social capital The role of social capital in the strategic organisation of family businesses are also explored While managers at other firms and government bureaucratic officials have a positive and monotonic relationship with performance that for social capital from politicians has a negative relationship with performance for non family businesses
