AccessAsia ,1997
Economic Cooperation and Challenges in the Pacific ,1994 Economic Dynamism in the Asia-Pacific Grahame Thompson,2005-10-18 This broad ranging student textbook examines the rise of the Asia Pacific as an important economic region It looks at the sources of that rise its future development and the possible consequences for the global economy The analysis is divided into three sections considering how far the Asia Pacific has developed as a regional system looking at the patterns of integration of the principal economies the relationship between the key individual economies of Japan Korea China and the United States how the rise of the Asia Pacific economy has affected the international economic system In so doing it provides much needed insights not only into the growth of this powerful economic region but also the international context of Asia Pacific development Development, Trade, and the Asia-Pacific Basant Kapur,Euston Quah,Hian Teck Hoon,1996 Institutionalizing Asia and the Pacific Young Jong Choi,Yöng-jong Ch'oe,1998 The Asia Pacific Region in the Global Economy Richard G. Harris,Canada. Industry Canada,1996 Asian Economic Journal ,1998 Empirical Studies of the Pattern of Bilateral Trade in the Asia-Pacific Region Ahmad Fuad Rahmany,1997 This dissertation reports the results of three empirical studies concerning the pattern of bilateral trade among countries of East Asia and the Pacific Rim countries the so called Asia Pacific region The first study tests several hypotheses concerning the determinants of bilateral intra industry trade for a sample of 15 Asia Pacific countries It is concluded that similarity in relative factor endowments between two countries results in a higher share of intra industry trade in the total bilateral trade Sii between them however that similarity in country size results in a lower Sii which contradicts some findings of previous studies Economies of scale were not found while distance and tariffs were found to be significant determinants of intra industry trade The interesting result was that intra industry trade appears to be characterized by vertically differentiated products suggesting that the pattern of specialization was affected by the difference in technological capabilities between the developed and less developed countries in the region The second study uses gravity type models to make inferences about relative factor intensities of several manufacturing groups and to test the Linder hypothesis that the more similar the per capita incomes between two countries the larger the trade in manufactured goods between them It is found that for 1980 1993 there occurred no significant change in capital labor intensities in the composition of the manufacturing sectors This suggests that the relocation of manufacturing from developed to developing countries that occurred in search for low wage workers did not necessarily lead to less capital intensive technologies The Linder hypothesis was not found to be supported The third study assesses the desirability of regionalization in the Asia Pacific region ASEAN was not while APEC was found to be a natural trading bloc This implies that geographical proximity between ASEAN countries is not sufficient to create a natural trading bloc The strongest natural trading partners were found to be the East Asian countries and the U S suggesting that policies that exclude the U S from the East Asian trading bloc are welfare worsening The formation of a free trade area among a group of countries may result in a welfare gain if their ex ante intra bloc trade exceeds their external trade

Triangle Papers ,1997 Economic Interdependence and Development in East Asia Hans C. Blomqvist,1997-08-26 The rapid development of Asian countries has met with mixed reactions among economists Most economists understand that a genuine development is underway but since the process has been a complex one each has been able to apply favorite explanations to the situation In Eastern Asia regional interdependence has been important to developing countries This work discusses the interaction between the regional economies through trade and foreign direct investment relating interaction to economic growth and development
