Pain And Touch:

Pain, Touch, and Decision Making Lina Koppel, 2020-11-04 Stimulation of sensory nerves can give rise to powerful affective experiences. Noxious stimuli can give rise to pain, an unpleasant experience which in turn causes suffering and constitutes a major societal burden. Touch, on the other hand, can feel pleasant and plays an important role in social relationships and well-being. Slow, gentle stroking of the skin, in particular, has been shown to activate C-tactile (CT) afferents, which are thought to signal affective and socially relevant aspects of touch. However, little is known about how pain and affective touch influence everyday decision making. In Paper I, we investigated the effect of acute physical pain on risk taking and intertemporal choice. Participants (n = 109) performed a series of economic decision making tasks once while experiencing acute thermal pain and once in a no-pain control condition. Results indicated that pain increased risk taking for monetary gains but not for equivalent losses and increased impatience. In Paper II, we investigated the effect of affective touch on betrayal aversion, altruism, and risk taking. Participants (n = 120) performed a series of economic decision making tasks once while being stroked on the forearm at CT-optimal speed using a soft painter's brush and once in a no-touch control condition. Results indicated no effect of affective touch on any of the outcome measures. In Paper III, we investigated how the ability to affect an upcoming painful event via voluntary action influences cortical processing of ongoing somatosensory stimulation. fMRI data was collected from 30 participants while they performed a task that involved pressing a response button to reduce the duration of upcoming thermal stimuli. Whole-brain analyses revealed no significant task-related effects in brain regions typically involved in pain, except activation in a cluster in the anterior cingulate cortex (ACC) which was greater when upcoming stimulation was painful than when it was nonpainful. However, region of interest analyses in the anterior insula (AI) and midcingulate cortex (MCC) indicated that the noxious nature of the upcoming stimulation as well as the ability to affect it influenced processing of ongoing stimulation in both of these regions. Activation in MCC but not AI also correlated with response times. Taken together, these studies contribute to the broader understanding of everyday decision making and of how affective experiences such as pain and touch shape everyday decisions and behaviors.

Stimulering av nervfibrer i huden kan ge upphov till starka känsloupplevelser. Skadliga eller potentiellt skadliga stimuli kan ge upphov till smärta, en obehaglig upplevelse som i sin tur orsakar lidande och har stora socioekonomiska konsekvenser. Beröring andra sidan kan upplevas som behagligt och är en viktig del av sociala relationer. Förhållandevis lite kunskap finns dock om hur smärta och beröring påverkar vardagligt beslutsfattande. Blir vi otillrägga av att uppleva smärta? Tar vi fler risker? Gör vi beröring oss själva och mer tillitsfulla? I denna avhandling presenteras tre studier som försöker svara på denna typ av frågor. I den första studien fick deltagarna smärtsamt stimuli samtidigt som de fattade beslut om pengar. Besluten involverade till exempel att välja mellan en säker vinst på 50 kr eller att singla slant om att vinna 100 kr. Resultaten visade att smärta ökade risktagandet för vinster men inte för motsvarande förluster. Deltagare som upplevde smärta var även mer otillrägga, dvs de föredrog i större utsträckning snabba bel
