Thompson,2012-12-02 Neural Mechanisms of Goal Directed Behavior and Learning provides information pertinent to the neuronal mechanisms of motivation and learning This book focuses on the theoretical frameworks within which researchers analyze specific problems Organized into six parts encompassing 39 chapters this book begins with an overview of the problem of goal directed behavior that occupies a central position in psychology This text then examines the behavioral investigations that are directed at delineating the role of contiguity and determining the possible mechanisms of reinforcement in classical defense and reward conditioning Other chapters consider the homeostatic regulation of various functions such as nutrition temperature respiration blood pressure and fluid and electrolyte balance This book discusses as well the effects of experimental treatments on memory The final chapter deals with the relationship between perception and memory This book is a valuable resource for psychologists and scientists Graduate students in behavioral neuroscience will also find this book useful

Neural Mechanisms of Startle Behavior Robert C.

Eaton,1984-10 In the past fifteen years there has been considerable interest in neural circuits that initiate behavior patterns For many types of behaviors this involves decision making circuits whose primary elements are neither purely sensory nor motor but represent a higher order of neural processing Of the large number of studies on such systems analyses of startle circuits compose a major portion and have been carried out on systems found throughout the animal kingdom Startle has been an important model because of the reliability of the behavioral act for laboratory study and the accessibility of the underlying neural circuitry However probably because of the breadth of the subject this material has never been reviewed in a comprehensive way that presents the elements common to startle circuits in the different animal systems in which they occur This book presents a diversity of approaches based on a broad background of animal groups ranging from the earliest nervous systems in cnidarians to the most recently evolved and advanced in mammals The behaviors themselves are all short latency fast motor acts when considered on the time scale of the organism and involve avoidance or evasion although in some cases we do not yet completely understand their natural role These behaviors occur in response to stimuli that have sudden or unexpected onset Whalen, Richard F. Thompson,Marcel Verzeano,2013-10-22 The Neural Control of Behavior contains some of the material presented and discussed at the first interdisciplinary conference on the neural control of behavior held at the Department of Psychobiology of the University of California Irvine in June 1968 The compendium presents papers prepared by scientists from a variety of disciplines which touched upon the primary concerns of psychobiology Main topics covered include neural mechanisms evoked responses and network dynamics perceptual mechanisms and behavioral and cellular responses to novel and repeated stimuli Hypothalamic mechanisms for motivational and species typical behavior learning and memory and the behavior of hippocampal neurons during conditioning experiments are also discussed Psychologists neurologists and psychobiologists will find the book very insightful Neural Mechanisms of Startle Behavior Robert C.

Eaton,2014-09-01 Neural Mechanisms of Cognitive Control and Emotion in Birds Andras Csillag,Toshiya Matsushima,2023-02-14 Neural Mechanisms in Animal Behavior A. M. Granada,W. N. Hayes,1972 Neural mechanisms of behavior: performance versus learning Richard J. Beninger,1989 Neuroscience of Preference and Choice Raymond J. Dolan,Tali Sharot,2011-09-30 One of the most pressing questions in neuroscience psychology and economics today is how does the brain generate preferences and make choices With a unique interdisciplinary approach this volume is among the first to explore the cognitive and neural mechanisms mediating the generation of the preferences that guide choice From preferences determining mundane purchases to social preferences influencing mating choice through to moral decisions the authors adopt diverse approaches to answer the question Chapters explore the instability of preferences and the common neural processes that occur across preferences Edited by one of the world s most renowned cognitive neuroscientists each chapter is authored by an expert in the field with a host of international contributors Emphasis on common process underlying preference generation makes material applicable to a variety of disciplines neuroscience psychology economics law philosophy etc Offers specific focus on how preferences are generated to guide decision making carefully examining one aspect of the broad field of neuroeconomics and complementing existing volumes Features outstanding international scholarship with chapters written by an expert in the topic area Research Grants Index National Institutes of Health (U.S.). Division of Research Grants,1972 Research Awards Index ,1979 Brainstem Mechanisms of Behavior W. R. Klemm,Robert P. Vertes,1990-08-09 An overview of the fundamental ways that the brainstem influences the initiation mediation and regulation of behavior and the first major survey in the subject since the appearance of the classic work The Reticular Formation Revisted Also featured are an introductory tutorial section that synthesizes research discoveries with the historical milestones in brainstem research basic neuroanatomy arousal etc that are related to behavioral readiness sensory and motor functions and neuroendocrine and autonomic functions The latter part of the book features a series of specialized topics each written by a noted authority in the field The Behavioral and Neural Mechanisms of the Social Transmission of Information and Behavior Laura Ann Agee, 2021 Social learning can be broadly defined as the acquisition of new information or behaviors via observation of or interaction with a conspecific The ability to learn socially is particularly important in humans and dysfunction of this ability can deeply impair functioning As such developing a thorough understanding of the circumstances under which social learning can occur and moreover how social input is processed by the brain to produce social learning is essential In this dissertation I document the findings of a number of investigations into this topic conducted using rat models of social learning A specific emphasis is placed on the social transmission of food preference STFP model in which a naïve observer rat acquires a preference for a food through interaction with a conspecific demonstrator that has recently eaten that food In the experiments outlined here I have 1 assessed whether observer rats are able to adjust their learning in the STFP paradigm based on the quality of information a given demonstrator has provided in the past 2 tested the ability of rats to learn to associate a neutral cue with the presentation of a reward by observing an experienced demonstrator react to the cue 3 examined activity of the immediate early gene IEG product Arc following dual recall of a socially transmitted food preference and a socially acquired fear association and 4 examined expression of the IEG product c Fos in orexin A producing neurons and related areas following acquisition and recall in STFP Behaviorally our results indicated that in the STFP model observers did not adjust their learning based on the characteristics of their demonstrator Similarly observer rats were unable to acquire a cue reward association through observation of a trained demonstrator alone although our results did indicate that their later behavior following direct learning was modulated by the behavior of their demonstrator Finally our investigation of the brain mechanisms underlying social learning found no clear differences in Arc expression following STFP social fear recall and no change in orexin A producing cell activity though orexin cell activity was highly predictive of social behavior and food consumption
