Mistress Of The House:

Mistress of the House, Mistress of Heaven Anne K. Capel, Glenn Markoe, 1996 The first of its kind exhibit cataloged here focuses on the women of Egypt from all levels of society in works compiled strictly from American collections by American curators Because the quantity of written records is limited though enormous in comparison to most early societies there is still much guesswork involved in determining the place women held in Egyptian society It is clear that unlike most ancient and not so ancient societies Egypt conferred on women the legal right to own property and to barter their own goods which means a larger record for current study The essays here are both erudite and fascinating to read the illustrations are clear and well presented in conjunction with the text 117 colour 112 b w illustrations Mistress of the House ROSEMARY. eight important novels argues that property is a decisive undercurrent in narrative structures and modes as well as an important gender signature in society and culture Tim Dolin suggests that the formal development of nineteenth century domestic fiction can only be understood in the context of changes in the theory and laws of property indeed femininity and its representation cannot be considered separately from property relations and their reform He presents original readings of novels in which a woman owns acquires or loses property focusing on exchanges between patriarchal cultural authority the woman question and narrative form and on the place of domestic fiction in a culture in which property relations and gender relations are subject to radical review Each chapter revolves around a representative text but refers substantially to other material both other novels and contemporary social legal political and feminist commentary History William Moir
