Managing Teacher Workload:

Managing Teacher Workload Sara Bubb, 2004 This book deserves to be the standard introduction to teachers' abilities to achieve a work life balance. It reflects the challenges and the changes facing teachers dealing effectively with both the big picture and the fine details that matter most. Dr Mary Bousted General Secretary Association of Teachers and Lecturers

Managing Teacher Workload: A Whole-School Approach to Finding the Balance Nansi Ellis, 2016-08-30 It is acknowledged that the quality of teaching is the critical factor in raising standards of learning. And yet teachers' workload has rocketed in recent years leaving morale for many at rock bottom. Recent DfE analysis shows that primary teachers work around 60 hours a week and school leaders even longer. This is not sustainable. Teachers need an end to excessive working hours. Edited by Nansi Ellis, assistant general secretary at leading teaching union ATL. Managing Teacher Workload brings together leading educationalists to discuss real practical ways to solve the biggest problem in the profession. Contributors include Mary Bousted General Secretary ATL, Emma Knights Chief Executive of the National Governors' Association (NGA), Heath Monk Executive Director of the Schools of King Edward VI in Birmingham, former CEO of the Future Leaders Trust, Julian Stanley chief executive Education Support Partnership, Mary Myatt, Joe Pardoe, Lee Card, Toby French, Judith Vaughan, Collette Bradford.

Teacher's Guide to Classroom Management Daniel Linden, Duke, Adrienne Maravich, Meckel, 1984 Supporting the Recruitment and Retention of Teachers in Schools with High Proportions of Disadvantaged Pupils, 2023 This mixed methods workload practice review sought to understand the challenges to teacher workload faced by schools in England, especially those serving areas of high disadvantage and the approaches being used to mitigate them. Survey data was collected from 1 326 practising classroom teachers and school leaders from 1 137 schools with 12 interviews with teachers and leaders. A rapid desk review of 30 sources informed the development of the survey and interview instruments. The study found that the majority of schools are using multiple strategies to manage workload and they are having a small effect. Planning, Preparation and Assessment (PPA) 3 times was the most commonly reported strategy, followed by access to existing schemes of work, lesson plans and collaborative lesson planning.
