Pagan Family Values S. Zohreh Kermani, 2013-07-29 For most of its history contemporary Paganism has been a religion of converts Yet as it enters its fifth decade it is incorporating growing numbers of second generation Pagans for whom Paganism is a family tradition not a religious worldview arrived at via a spiritual quest In Pagan Family Values S Zohreh Kermani explores the ways in which North American Pagan families pass on their beliefs to their children and how the effort to socialize children influences this new religious movement The first ethnographic study of the everyday lives of contemporary Pagan families this volume brings their experiences into conversation with contemporary issues in American religion Through formal interviews with Pagan families participant observation at various pagan events and data collected via online surveys Kermani traces the ways in which Pagan parents transmit their religious values to their children Rather than seeking to pass along specific religious beliefs Pagan parents tend to seek to instill values such as religious tolerance and spiritual independence that will remain with their children throughout their lives regardless of these children s ultimate religious identifications Pagan parents tend to construct an idealized magical childhood for their children that mirrors their ideal childhoods The socialization of children thus becomes a means by which adults construct and make meaningful their own identities as Pagans Kermani s meticulous fieldwork and clear engaging writing provide an illuminating look at parenting and religious expression in Pagan households and at how new religions pass on their beliefs to a new generation

Opening the Broom Closet , 2005 The purpose of this exploratory qualitative case study is to uncover the essence and meaning of Pagan parent s lived experience Three Pagan couples completed a two hour interview about being Pagan parents The questions focused on describing what it means to be a Pagan parent Specific questions asked about their roles fears difficulties aspirations for their children discrimination and specific aspects of Paganism like psychic abilities karma and rituals The data was analyzed from a phenomenological perspective The participants spent most of the interviews discussing aspects of Paganism and parenting All of the couples expressed experiences of discrimination in their past and present lives However they feel the discrimination they experience insignificantly impacts them This seems due to life decisions they made to lessen the impact of discrimination in their lives like living in accepting locations and not disclosing their religion While the methods vary all of the participants discussed discrimination with their children They teach their children about Paganism through front loading teaching their children verbal responses to discrimination and discussing how others might mistreat them and possible reasons for discrimination Although discrimination plays a miniscule role in their lives the intricacies of pagan parenting dominate it Participants want to transmit their values teach decision making skills and focusing on solutions convey imaginations are of value and teach them about various Pagan beliefs and practices They accomplish this by modeling appropriate behavior exposing their children to different experiences conducting discussions and providing mentors Participants perform the above to help their children become empowered self aware and happy
