Excerpt from A Painter's Progress: Being a Partial Survey Along the Pathway of Art in America and Europe With Sundry Examples and Precepts Culled From Personal Encounter With Existing Conditions and Reference to the Careers of Many Artists Both Ancient and Modern 191. When one whose life from his earliest years has been devoted to art is called from the preoccupation of active production to prepare a series of lectures upon some theme connected with the history, theory and practice of the fine arts, the comprehensive programme to say nothing of the elasticity of the catholic mind suggests at once a score of subjects. The modern artist is the heir of the ages. Since the world began a certain type of man has been active with the desire to depict upon a plane surface or to mould in some material images of the life.
