

B. Sociolinguistics and Dialectology

- ▶ Dialectology is a study of geographical varieties of language. From the definition dialectology seems to be a part of sociolinguistics areas. However, there are at least two main differences between the two.
- ▶ First, dialectology is interested in historical development of language varieties and it survey mainly the comparison between the dialects and the standard code, whereas sociolinguistics is more interested in synchronic analysis and describes the relations between the language varieties and the social dynamism.
- ▶ Secondly, dialectologists are concerned with analyzing various linguistics forms and the cognates, while sociolinguistics takes as important objects of analysis only when the social issues are correlated to them. After all, both share interests in language varieties and the significance of them in understanding the concept and idea of a language.

Methods In Dialectology:

Methods in Dialectology Alan R. Thomas, 1988 This book reflects the current concerns of dialectologists as they exploit methodological tools in the twin contexts of insights which derive from sociology via sociolinguistics and their awareness of the interplay between synchronic variation and linguistic change New Methods in Dialectology P. Th. van Reenen, M. E. H. Schouten, 2019-11-05 No detailed description available for New Methods in Dialectology Proceedings of Methods XIII Barry Heselwood, 2010 This volume of papers from the 13th International Conference on Methods in Dialectology held at the University of Leeds in 2008 collects together current research and recent methodological developments in the study of dialects by new and established scholars. It is organised into themed sections reporting on historical dialectology, dialect literature, the production of dialect maps and atlases and the collection and organisation of material for dialect dictionaries and corpora. Perceptual dialectology and dialect intelligibility are also featured and there are linguistic analyses of dialectal data from many language varieties The future of dialects Marie-Hélène Côté, Remco Knooihuizen, John Nerbonne, 2016-02-05 Traditional dialects have been encroached upon by the increasing mobility of their speakers and by the onslaught of national languages in education and mass media. Typically older dialects are leveling to become more like national languages. This is regrettable when the last articulate traces of a culture are lost but it also promotes a complex dynamics of interaction as speakers shift from dialect to standard and to intermediate compromises between the two in their forms of speech. Varieties of speech thus live on in modern communities where they still function to mark provenance but increasingly cultural and social provenance as opposed to pure geography. They arise at times from the need to function throughout the different groups in society but they also may have roots in immigrants' speech and just as certainly from the ineluctable dynamics of groups wishing to express their identity to themselves and to the world. The future of dialects is a selection of the papers presented at Methods in Dialectology XV held in Groningen, the Netherlands 11-15 August 2014. While the focus is on methodology the volume also includes specialized studies on varieties of Catalan, Breton, Croatian, Belgian, Dutch, English in the US, the UK and in Japan, German including Swiss German, Italian including Tyrolean, Italian, Japanese and Spanish as well as on heritage languages in Canada Proceedings of Methods XIV Alena Barysevich, Alexandra D'Arcy, David Heap, 2014 These papers from the 14th International Conference on Methods in Dialectology held at the University of Western Ontario in 2011 bring together methodological innovations and current research on the study of dialects and language variation by new and established scholars from different countries working on a number of language varieties Proceedings of Methods XVI Yoshiyuki Asahi, 2020-04-30 This book is a collection of papers presented at Methods XVI in Tachikawa, Japan. Topics in the papers are about innovation, language change, corpus studies and atlas. Authors from different parts of the world made their contributions The Future of Dialects Marie-Hélène Côté, 2016-01-28 Traditional dialects have been encroached upon by the increasing mobility of their speakers and by the
