

Internationalisation of the Curriculum in Action

Case Study - Nursing

This case study was developed as part of an ALTC National Teaching Fellowship, Internationalisation of the Curriculum in Action in 2010-2011. One of the outputs of the fellowship was a process model of internationalisation of the curriculum. The model identifies five-stages of internationalisation of the curriculum:

- Review and Reflect
- Imagine
- Revise and Plan
- Act
- Evaluate

More details of the process model and supporting resources are available from www.loc.net.au or from the Fellow, Associate Professor Betty Leask betty.leask@unisa.edu.au.

As you read through this case study think about the following questions:

1. What are the enabling factors within the institutional context?
2. What does the case study tell you about the process of IoC?
3. What does it tell you about the product, an internationalised curriculum?
4. What questions does it raise for you?

Institutional context

The university's approach to internationalisation is embedded in its policies and mission. University policy documents describe a comprehensive approach to internationalisation of the curriculum.

Recognition and reward for staff actions in internationalisation is specifically addressed in documentation, primary responsibility for which is born by the Deputy Vice Chancellor International. The DVCi emphasises the University's commitment to internationalising the curriculum for all students. The University demonstrates this commitment in various ways, including by promoting and supporting opportunities for students to acquire international experience and develop inclusive perspectives.

University documentation describes a multi-level approach to internationalisation, encompassing elements such as joint degrees involving collaboration with international partner institutions; recognising and rewarding student endeavours in internationalisation; finding ways to facilitate quality interaction between international and domestic students in both academic and non-academic settings; as well as committing to an ongoing process of internationalising the curriculum to produce graduates with the skills, knowledge and experience necessary for living and working in a globalizing society.
