

Maps Tell the Story of Mexico

The green areas on our graphic-relief maps are lowlands. The buff areas are highlands. How are mountains indicated? Name two ranges that form a huge Y. Name the plateau that lies between them. What lowland borders the Gulf of Mexico? The cross-section diagram shows a slice of Mexico from east to west through Mexico City.

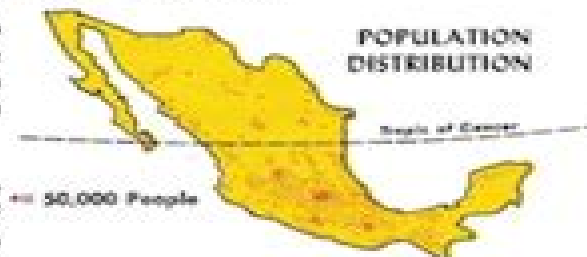

Only a small part of Mexico is suitable for farming. More is useful for grazing. Which needs more rainfall? Which supports more people?

Does more rain fall in the northern or southern part of Mexico? In which of these two regions do more people live?

What is the average temperature of Mexico City? Is it in the lowlands or on the plateau? What is the average temperature of Veracruz? Where is it located? In which city is it more comfortable to live? Do most of the people of Mexico live in the highlands or the lowlands? Why?
