

Michael Ayrton (1924-2009) was one of the finest English sculptors of the mid-20th century. He was also a designer, whose painting would now always reflect sculpture.

In this first biography of sculptors by his family, it examines in detail and with the insight of the artist on the father. Ayrton knew it through his presence: an phenomenally productive & his tragically early death at 54. Talented in many skills began his career designing Richard's Makers at 19, a late conversion then to, 'Let his approach on the BBC', 'Beats Time', and all his a marvellous combination between the art and the sciences. A sculptor developed as an artist & designer and challenging.

But above all he was an innovator - sculptor, painter, and vital force in sculpture and drawings for the Cox Brothers and the Museum and works of Michael Ayrton.
