Islamic Divorce in North America Julie Macfarlane, 2012-04-30 Policy makers and the public are increasingly attentive to the role of shari'a in the everyday lives of Western Muslims with negative associations and public fears growing among their non-Muslim neighbors in the United States and Canada The most common way North American Muslims relate to shari'a is in their observance of Muslim marriage and divorce rituals recourse to traditional Islamic marriage and to a lesser extent divorce is widespread Julie Macfarlane has conducted hundreds of interviews with Muslim couples as well as with religious and community leaders and family conflict professionals Her book describes how Muslim marriage and divorce processes are used in North America and what they mean to those who embrace them as a part of their religious and cultural identity The picture that emerges is of an idiosyncratic private ordering system that reflects a wide range of attitudes towards contemporary family values and changes in gender roles Some women describe pervasive assumptions about restrictions on their role in the family system as well as pressure to accept these values and to stay married Others of both genders describe the gradual modernization of Islamic family traditions and the subsequent emergence of a Western shari'a but a continuing commitment to the rituals of Muslim marriage and divorce in their private lives Readers will be challenged to consider how the secular state should respond in order to find a balance between state commitment to universal norms and formal equality and the protection of religious freedom expressed in private religious and cultural practices The Criminal Law Journal of India, 1919

Not 'Completely' Divorced Anisa Buckley, 2019-12-03 Within Muslim communities in Australia there is great diversity in Islamic practice and religiosity When it comes to marriage and divorce however many Muslims still wish to observe religious procedures alongside civil ones and while marriage is relatively straightforward divorce raises more complications The situation of women in limping marriages in particular has raised debates among Muslims and the Australian public regarding the autonomy of Muslim women and the function of community family law processes Based upon in-depth research with divorced Muslim women community leaders and local religious authorities Buckley reveals the complexities facing Muslim women in negotiating family expectations cultural norms and traditional Islamic laws Through their stories and experiences the Muslim women in this book demonstrate how they are able to navigate the intricacies of
