The Sport of Life and Death E. Michael Whittington, Mint Museum of Art, 2001 The Mesoamerican ballgame was no ordinary sport Played by the Olmecs Maya and Aztecs from at least 1200 BC to the Spanish Conquest in the 16th century AD it was both a contest of breathtaking athletic skill and a ritual spectacle in which the struggle between the opposing forces of day and night good and evil life and death was enacted by the teams on the ballcourt The Sport of Life and Death the most comprehensive work ever on the Mesoamerican ballgame brings together a range of these works of art of striking beauty

vivacity and power from tiny jade carvings of the Olmecs depicting their player kings to the ring shaped stone goals that once stood in Aztec ballcourts Essays by leading authorities on Mesoamerican art and culture discuss all aspects of the ballgame such as the natural history of rubber the magnificent architecture of the ballcourts the extraordinary equipment worn by the players the complex religious symbolism and ritual elements of the games and descriptions of versions that are still played today in Mexico Ulama Ted Leyenaar,2024-04-02 Organization of the Aztec Empire Stanford Mc Krause, Aztec society was divided into twenty clans called calpullis where religion exerted a predominant influence which consisted of groups of people connected by kinship territorial divisions the invocation of a particular god and continuation of ancient families linked by a kinship bond biological and religious that derived from the cult of the titular god Each clan had lands a temple and a chief or calpullec They were divided into three classes Nobles ordinary people and slaves Ancient Sports Source Wikipedia,2013-09 Please note that the content of this book primarily consists of articles available from Wikipedia or other free sources online Pages 23 Chapters Mesoamerican ballgame Ancient Olympic Games Mesoamerican ballcourt Marn Grook Mesoamerican rubber balls Chunkey Cuju Ulama Woggabaliri Duck on a Rock Excerpt The Mesoamerican ballgame was a sport with ritual associations played since 1 000 B C by the pre Columbian peoples of Mesoamerica The sport had different versions in different places during the millennia and a modern version of the game ulama is still played in a few places by the local indigenous population Pre Columbian ballcourts have been found throughout Mesoamerica as far south as Nicaragua and possibly as far north as the U S state of Arizona These ballcourts vary considerably in size but all have long narrow alleys with side walls against which the balls could bounce The rules of the ballgame are not known but judging from its descendant ball they were probably similar to racquetball where the aim is to keep the ball in play The stone ballcourt goals see photo to right are a late addition to the game This later addition of the game changed the game entirely though since an immediate win could be attained from them by tossing the balls in the ring or points could be scored by simply tossing the ball so that it touched the ring In the most widespread version of the game the players struck the ball with their hips although some versions allowed the use of forearms rackets bats or handstones The ball was made of solid rubber and weighed as much as 4 kg 9 lbs and sizes differed greatly over time or according to the version played The game had important ritual aspects and major formal ballgames were held as ritual events often featuring human sacrifice The sport was also played casually for recreation by children and perhaps even women Map showing sites where early ballcourts balls or figurines have been

Sport and Art Andrew Edgar,2016-04-08 Sport and Art explores relationship of sport to art It does not argue that sport is one of the arts but rather that sport and art hold common ground Both are ways in which humans confront philosophical challenges though they do this through very different media While art deploys sensual media such as paint or sound sport is the pursuit of a physical challenge at which the athlete may fail This is to propose in an argument that has its roots in Hegel s aesthetics that sport may be interpreted as a way of reflecting upon metaphysical and normative issues such as the nature of human freedom fate and chance and even our sense of space and time This argument is developed by proposing the concept of a sportworld an atmosphere of theory and a knowledge of history through which an event is interpreted and thereby constituted as sport Ultimately Sport and Art argues that in order to be truly appreciated sport must be understood within a modernist aesthetics That is to say that sport is not about beauty but rather about the struggle to find meaning in sporting triumph and crucially sporting failure This book was published as a special issue of Sport Ethics and Philosophy

Wilkinon (M.A.), 2009 Archaeology and history have traditionally labeled the Mesoamerican ballgames in their various forms as activities limited to the elites While there is considerable evidence to support elites dominating the game new discoveries support the supposition that commoners too might have played and that the ballgame had enormous impact on their lives I have reviewed the known sites in the Belize River Valley and have discovered patterns of construction techniques architectural styles and population ratios that show far more people were playing the ballgame than the two percent usually referred to as elites by anthropologists In particular as access to elite residential complexes became restricted in the Late Classic Period new courts were constructed outside of the civic centers and the only logical explanation for this is that they were constructed for non elite use Document
