Metallic Human:

Metal Ions in Toxicology: Effects, Interactions, Interdependencies Astrid Sigel, Helmut Sigel, Roland K.O.

Sigel, 2015-07-24 Volume 8 solely devoted to the toxicology of metals and metalloids as well as their compounds focuses on human health. Not surprisingly all related research areas are rapidly developing due to the role of metals and metalloids in the environment for the work place for food and water supply etc. Written by 40 internationally recognized experts the 14 stimulating chapters provide an authoritative and timely resource for scientists working in the wide range from analytical physical inorganic and environmental biochemistry all the way through to toxicology physiology and medicine. Volume 8 highlights supported by nearly 1900 references in a comprehensive and timely manner the principles of risk assessment regarding the effects of metals on human health. It examines how metal ions and their compounds affect the pulmonary, cardiovascular, gastrointestinal, including liver, hematological, immune and neurological systems, the kidney, skin and eyes as well as human reproduction and development. MILS 8 terminates with the role of metal ions as endocrine disrupters in genotoxicity and cancer risk.

Metal Ions in Toxicology Astrid Sigel, Helmut Sigel, Roland K. O. Sigel, 2011

It is an old wisdom that metals are indispensable for life. Indeed several of them like sodium, potassium and calcium are easily discovered in living matter. However the role of metals and their impact on life remained largely hidden until inorganic chemistry and coordination chemistry experienced a pronounced revival in the 1950s. The experimental and theoretical tools created in this period and their application to biochemical problems led to the development of the field or discipline now known as Bioinorganic Chemistry. Inorganic Biochemistry or more recently also often addressed as Biological Inorganic Chemistry. By 1970 Bioinorganic Chemistry was established and further promoted by the book series Metal Ions in Biological Systems founded in 1973 edited by H. S. Sigel who was soon joined by A. S. and published by Marcel Dekker Inc New York for more than 30 years. After this company ceased to be a family endeavor and its acquisition by another company we decided after having edited 44 volumes of the MIBS series the last two together with R. K. O. S. to launch a new and broader minded series to cover today's needs in the Life Sciences. Therefore the Sigel's new series is entitled Metal Ions in Life Sciences. After publication of the first four volumes 2006-2008 with John Wiley a most experienced Publisher in the Sciences.
