Ozone Measuring Instruments Of The Stratosphere Collected Works In Optics:

Optical Spectroscopic Techniques and Instrumentation for Atmospheric and Space Research, 1999 Ozone Measuring Instruments for the Stratosphere William B. Grant, 1989 Spectroscopy of the earth's Atmosphere and interstellar Medium K.N. Rao, 2012-12-02 Spectroscopy of the Earth's Atmosphere and Interstellar Medium focuses on the characteristics of the electromagnetic spectrum of the Earth's atmosphere in the far infrared and microwave regions. It discusses the modes of observation in field measurements and reviews the two techniques used in the spectral region. Organized into six chapters, this volume begins with an overview of the effect of water vapor absorption, followed by a discussion on the two frequently used methods for deriving atmospheric parameters from high-resolution infrared atmospheric spectra: namely, the equivalent width (EW) technique and the nonlinear least square fitting (NLSF). Other chapters consider the mechanisms by which interstellar clouds are formed. In addition, the book explores the composition of interstellar clouds, ion-molecule reactions, and the formation of stars. This book will be useful to anyone involved in or interested in learning more about the field of atmospheric spectroscopy, including scientists, aeronauts, astronomers, astrophysicists, and students.

Remote Sensing and Atmospheric Ozone Arthur Philip Cracknell, Costas Varotsos, 2012-06-21 The destruction of the ozone layer, together with global warming, is one of the hot environmental topics of today. This book examines the effect of human activities on atmospheric ozone, namely, the increase of tropospheric ozone and the general diminution of stratospheric ozone and the production of the Antarctic ozone hole. Also discussed is the role of remote sensing techniques in the understanding of the effects of human activities on atmospheric ozone, as well as in the development of social and political awareness of the damage to the ozone layer by man-made chemicals, principally CFCs. This led to the formulation and ratification in 1989 of the Montreal Protocol on controlling and banning the manufacture and use of chemicals that damage the ozone layer. Since then, remote sensing has played a key role in monitoring atmospheric ozone concentration and determining the success of the Montreal Protocol in protecting the ozone layer from further damage. In this book, the renowned authors discuss the sophisticated instruments that have been launched into space to study not only ozone but also other trace gases in the atmosphere, some of which play a key role in the generation and destruction of ozone in the atmosphere. Professors Cracknell and Varotsos also examine the satellite-borne instruments which are involved in monitoring the absorption of solar ultraviolet light in the atmosphere in relation both to the generation and destruction of ozone and consequently to human health. This scholarly book, written by the foremost experts in the field, looks at remote sensing and its employment in the various aspects of ozone science. It is widely acknowledged that global warming, due to anthropogenic greenhouse gas emissions, represents a threat to the sustainability of human life on Earth. However, many other threats are potentially just as serious, including atmospheric pollution, ozone depletion, water pollution, the degradation of agricultural land, deforestation, the depletion of the world's mineral resources, and population growth.

,1992 The Behavior of Systems in the Space Environment R.N. Dewitt,Dwight Duston,Anthony K. Hyder,2012-12-06 A NATO Advanced Study Institute ASI on the Behavior of Systems in the Space Environment was held at the Atholl Palace Hotel Pitlochry Perthshire Scotland from July 7 through July 19 1991 This publication is the Proceedings of the Institute The NATO Advanced Study Institute Program of the NATO Science Committee is a unique and valuable forum under whose auspices almost one thousand international tutorial meetings have been held since the inception of the program in 1959 The ASI is intended to be primarily a high level teaching activity at which a carefully defined subject is presented in a systematic and coherently structured program The subject is treated in considerable depth by lecturers eminent in their field and of international standing The subject is presented to other scientists who either will already have specialized in the field or possess an advanced general background The ASI is aimed at approximately the post doctoral level This ASI emphasized the basic physics of the space environment and the engineering aspects of the environment s interactions with spacecraft

Tunable Laser Applications Frank Duarte,1995-08-18 This work details tunable laser applications of broad interest historical significance and potential future value Atomic and molecular spectroscopy interferometry lightening triggering imaging laser radar lidar and gyroscopes are discussed The work focuses on various sources of coherent radiation such as optical parametric oscillators external cavity semiconductors lasers and dye gas CO2 ultrashort pulse and free electron lasers

Remote Sensing and Global Climate Change Robin A. Vaughan,Arthur P. Cracknell,2013-06-29 Experts report the state of the art in the study of global climate change using remote sensing techniques Topics covered include the principles of remote sensing the management of data data requirements in climatology the principles of modelling the input of data into models and the application of remote sensing to the atmosphere ice and snow seas and land The book is highly topical given the current great public and scientific awareness of possible man made changes to the climate It is essential reading for anyone new to the field and invaluable as a reference work to those already working in it Atmospheric Ultraviolet Remote Sensing Robert E. Huffman,1992-10-19 This book is an introduction to the use of the ultraviolet for remote sensing of the Earth s atmosphere It covers the Earth s UV radiative environment experimental techniques and current applications it is my intention to provide the information needed to make a first approximation concerning the use of the ultraviolet and to provide access through the literature for a more thorough study Contains recent UV applications not previously available in book form such as ozone auroral images and ionospheric sensing Features broad coverage of fundamentals of atmospheric geophysics with values for fluxes cross sections and radiances Covers techniques that illustrate principles of measurements with typical values Contains numerous references to original literature Optical Engineering ,1991 Publishes papers reporting on research and development in optical science and engineering and the practical applications of known optical science engineering and technology Acid Precipitation ,1990 Molecular Spectroscopy: Spectroscopy of the Earth's atmosphere and interstellar medium K. Narahari Rao,C. Weldon Mathews,1972 Atmospheric Ozone

Variability Kirill I[A]kovlevich Kondrat'ev, Costas Varotsos, 2000-04 It is well known that the ozone layer protects the Earth and its life from the harmful ultraviolet UV radiation of the sun It has also been discovered that this layer was being depleted to the extent that holes were appearing in it by several substances such as CFCs which have since been banned Despite this action recent studies have shown that the ozone layer is still being depleted at a rapid rate and that holes are now beginning to appear over areas which are quite densely populated Atmospheric Ozone Variability examines the potential problems that depletion of ozone causes in relation to climate change human health and the ecosystem It also examines the ways in which ozone is formed and depleted as being fundamental to the debate
