Models Of The Nervous System

Stephen David Larson

Models Of The Nervous System:

Models of the Nervous System Sid Deutsch,1967    Model Systems of Development and Aging of the Nervous System Antonia Vernadakis,Alain M. Privat,Jean M. Lauder,Paola S. Timiras,2012-12-06 The last decade has generated a multitude of studies using in vitro model systems to explore growth and differentiation of the nervous system Although the findings have been exciting and have revealed unique properties of neural cells considerable concern continues to be expressed regarding the significance of in vitro findings in terms of their applicability to in vivo biological events To examine this issue further a group of scientists presented and discussed their findings at a conference sponsored by the Institute of Developmental Neuroscience and Aging held in Crete Greece 26 29 May 1985 The conference was cosponsored by the University of Crete and was generously supported by the Ministry of Research and Technology of Greece Tourism Organization of Greece and also Sandoz and FIDIA The Directors of the Institute of Developmental Neuroscience and Aging are indebted to these Institutions for their support For the success of this conference the Directors owe much to Drs Eleni Fleischer Lambropoulos and Yiannis Tsouderos who spent countless hours in making arrangements so that the participants would have not only a scientific but also a unique cultural experience Several chapters of this book focus on the complex phenomena of neurogenesis and gliogenesis and the modulation of neuronal differentiation The concept that neuronal differentiation has both genetic and epigenetic components is documented by elegant studies using both in vitro cultured cells and neurons transplanted in vivo    Identification Models of the Nervous System David Zipser,1991    Catalogue of Bowdoin College and the Medical School of Maine Bowdoin College,1908    Descriptive Catalogue of the Embryological Models Arthur Milnes Marshall,1891    Indiana University Catalog Indiana University,1901    Permuted Medical Subject Headings National Library of Medicine (U.S.),2001    Laboratory Equipment for Psychological Experiments Charles Hubbard Judd,1907    Bowdoin College Bowdoin College,1905    A Demonstration Model of the Brain-stem Richard Warren Harvey,1910    Annual Report ... impractical or impossible questions to be answered. Because of the nature of the nervous system these data structures must be capable of dealing with data describing parts of the nervous system that vary in size across eight orders of magnitude otherwise known as multi scale data. These parts include molecules, parts of cells, cells and their circuits, brain regions and features of gross anatomy. In order to address this challenge I distinguish between information about the nervous system that expresses facts or semantic relationships the what from information that expresses images or spatial information the where. I apply a data structure known as an ontology to describe parts of cells relevant to neuroscience i.e. subcellular anatomy. This ontology is applied to enable automated question answering i.e. inference from data sets displaying parts of cells that are derived from electron microscopy. The challenges of building these data structures as a neuroscience community are reviewed and in response I present an online software system NeuroLex.org that provides a first step towards addressing them. Additional examples of automated question answering in neuroanatomy are shown using the NeuroLex knowledge base which now spans 17 000 concepts specific to neuroscience. To address the challenge of the where of neuroscience I present an online software system the Whole Brain Catalog that enables two dimensional, three dimensional and four dimensional i.e. time varying multi scale data sets to be spatially integrated within a common coordinate system. These data are then navigable by a user in three dimensions in real time and across spatial scales and can be integrated to answer scientific questions. The dissertation concludes with a look towards the future of the continued convergence between computer science and neuroscience.
