THE first examination for membership of the Royal College of General Practitioners was held in November 1965, when five candidates (four of whom were successful) presented for an experimental 'test of knowledge of the details of clinical medicine and of the ancillary services'. Until that time, admission to membership had been through the processes of the Board of Censors, and although the role an examination might play had been the subject of protracted and at times heated debate it was not until the mid-1960s that dissatisfaction with these processes led to the experiments with a more structured and formal method of assessment.<sup>1</sup> As a result of these experiments, Council determined that from 1968 membership should be achieved only by candidates who had completed a period of vocational training and had passed the membership examination.

The first compulsory examination held in November 1968 attracted 32 candidates, the second in May of the following year 46, and by 1971 the annual total had exceeded 163. Within four years this had risen to 400, and within a further four years to something over 1,200. Since 1968, therefore, nearly 9,000 candidates have been examined and almost 6,000 new Members admitted. Successful candidates now constitute approximately 66 per cent of the total membership.

It seemed appropriate at this point, 15 years after its introduction, to review the methods of the examination and outline ways in which these are likely to develop.

Theoretical background

The purpose of any professional examination is to assess the extent to which the specific educational objectives appropriate to the completion of a defined task have been achieved. The more sophisticated the task, the more numerous the objectives and the more complex their assessment.

If it is to be effective, an examination must be valid and reliable. Validity is the extent to which the examination measures objectives appropriate to the task, reliability is the consistency with which they are measured. Validity has been subdivided into:

1. content validity;
2. predictive validity;
3. construct validity;

Content validity describes the extent to which the examination samples the attributes of the candidate over the whole range of the topics to be tested. It is important in medicine and particularly important in a subject as broad as general practice.

Predictive validity is concerned with the extent to which the examination predicts the subsequent performance of candidates in their task.

Construct validity relates to the attributes tested by each component of an examination and is a measure of the extent to which each educational objective is assessed by an appropriate technique.

Reliability describes the consistency with which similar results are produced when candidates are repeatedly assessed using the same technique or when rated by a variety of observers for the same characteristic. An effective examination, therefore, makes reliable assessments of valid educational objectives derived from an adequate description of a task.

Transcultural Medicine B. Qureshi,2012-12-06 WHY WE MUST PRACTISE TRANSCULTURAL MEDICINE Health professionals and GPs should concern themselves with ethnicity religion and culture as much as with the age sex and social class of their patients Transcultural medicine is the knowledge of medical and communication encounters between a doctor or health worker of one ethnic group and a patient of another It embraces the physical psychological and social aspects of care as well as the scientific aspects of culture religion and ethnicity without getting involved in the politics of segregation or integration English general practitioners and health professionals tend to regard everyone as English and to assume that all patients have similar needs Would that it were as simple as that For economic reasons based on supply and demand the mass migration of working populations from the new Commonwealth countries along with their dependent relatives including their parents to Britain took place during one decade the 1960s Broadly speaking the workers were in their thirties and forties and their dependent parents were in their fifties and sixties All these will of course be 30 years older in the 1990s

The GP Trainer's Handbook Paul Middleton,Steve Field,2001 If you can imagine it it will happen if you can't you're out of it This book is a white knuckle ride It drills down into what we are doing now and comes up in the future to see what comes next The book is a commentary and a clarion call and an invitation to see round corners and a clarion call to respond to what's there Roy Lilley has been speaking on Futureproofing around the world throughout the nineties His aim has been to awaken managers entrepreneurs and anyone who will listen to the fact that the world is changing Faster and faster like a spiral fundamentally and structurally leaving behind those who are unprepared Thousands of people are now meeting the challenges Futureproofing presents You decide keep up or give up If you have heard Roy Lilley speak on Futureproofing you will want this book if you have not yet heard him read it first with compassion it captures the technical and caring aspects of being a doctor Science is continually developing but compassion is unchanging But how relevant is compassion to the NHS today Compassion is central to the practice of health care Patients require compassion as much as they require knowledge and technical skill from their healthcare professionals Compassion should be a motivation for anyone choosing a career in primary care However in recent years there have been startling instances where compassion has not been shown Compassion Continuity and Caring in the NHS is a reminder that compassion is at the heart of good medical practice The book is split into sections on patients education and training clinicians and future developments There are overview chapters on access to health care the changing model of NHS care a history of GP selection procedures and ways of preparing the next generation of GPs This wide ranging book also contains chapters on specific topics the role of the multidisciplinary team homeless patients prescribing nursing in primary care post conflict symptoms suicide prevention and more Personal perspectives are also given A layman provides a personal account of the end of life care his wife received A junior doctor reflects on the different factors that guide compassion And a doctor from the United States offers a worrying picture of primary health care s possible fate This book looks to the future too with chapters on scholarship building resilience mindfulness continuity of care and the development of a new professionalism This book will help the reader reconsider and re evaluate compassion the characteristic so important in creating a long term relationship between health professional and patient The Journal of the Royal College of General Practitioners ,1984

Practice Papers for the MRCGP Written Exam, Paper 1 Rob Daniels,2005 Suitable for those sitting Paper 1 of the MRCGP Written examination Paper 1 comprises 12 questions featuring multiple essay questions MEQs and critical appraisal style questions to be answered in 3 5 hours Notes for the MRCGP Keith Palmer,1998-04-30 Notes for the MRCGP is a revision guide for the examination that guides the candidate through all of the perils and pitfalls of this examination The book is distinctly non clinical in style because most candidates should have a strong background in this area and the examiners tend to stress the non clinical areas that now pose most problems to the candidates This new edition reflects up to date changes to the exam which now includes a move away from negative marking of MCQs with more emphasis given to the video assessment to demonstrate consultation skills Fundholding is now an important part of being a GP and along with the role of computers the Health of the Nation the Patient s Charter and a new complaints procedure it is one of many new areas to receive attention in this edition Guide to Postgraduate Degrees, Diplomas and Courses in Medicine ,1998

New MRCGP in a Box Mallika Punukollu,2007-05-21 Flashcards for the MRCGP examination utilising standard question formats from the Royal College exams and containing relevant questions on one side of the card with answers and explanations on the reverse The aim of this new card format is to make your exam preparation time as efficient and straightforward as possible The flashcard format lends itself very well to studying with a colleague or trainee group New MRCGP in a Box is one of the few revision aids that contains information for all components of the MRCGP exam key facts for the written and oral viva as well as detailed practice EMQ questions There are 15 sections that cover topics such as the Gastro intestinal System the Genitourinary System Neurology Respiratory system Rheumatology Obstetrics and Gynaecology General Practice Basic Statistics Dermatology Cardiology Endocrinology ENT Infectious Diseases Ophthalmology Paediatrics and Psychiatry Practitioner ,1991-07 Training for General Practice Denis J. Pereira Gray,1982 The MRCGP Study Book T. A. I. Bouchier Hayes,John Fry,Eric Gambrill,Alistair Moulds,K. Young,2012-12-06 The Membership examination of the Royal College of General Practitioners has evolved and matured as a seal and a test on completion of vocational training More than 1000 candidates are taking the examination each year and an increasing majority are trainees who have completed their three year training period The whole concept and philosophy of the MRCGP has been questioned by critical cynics who refuse to accept general practice as a field of medical practice worthy of recognition as a specialty with its own core of know ledge skills and expertise and with its own special epidemiology pathology clinical presentations and management These cynical critics are being answered by the growth of the examination and its recognition within the profession as an important and necessary goal to be achieved The MRCGP exam has arrived it is here to stay and it will continue to grow and evolve The exam is no easy obstacle to negotiate It has a regular failure rate of 1 in 3 and it requires special preparation and study of its examinees if they are to understand its aims contents and methods It must not be assumed that even the brightest trainee can walk off the street enter the examination hall and be confident of passing It requires a few months of careful and guided preparation The Practitioner ,1996
