of the present work This need I felt a long time ago in my own area of analytical and empirical research in accounting theory and management science later I had the opportunity to teach for almost a decade graduate seminars in Methodology which offered particular insight into the methodological needs of students of such applied disciplines as business administration education engineering informatics etc Out of this effort grew the present book which among other things tries on one side to illuminate the difference and relationship between methods of cognition and methods of decision and on the other to sketch a framework suitable for depicting means end relationships in a holistic setting I believe that a systems methodology which incorporates recent endeavours of deontic logic decision theory information economics and related areas would be eminently suited to break the ground for such a future framework Yet systems theory has two major shortcomings which might prevent it from evolving into the desired methodology of applied science

Assessing Risk Assessment Christian Hugo Hoffmann, 2017-11-14 Christian Hugo Hoffmann undermines the citadel of risk assessment and management arguing that classical probability theory is not an adequate foundation for modeling systemic and extreme risk in complex financial systems He proposes a new class of models which focus on the knowledge dimension by precisely describing market participants own positions and their propensity to react to outside changes The author closes his thesis by a syncretical reflection on methods and elaborates on the meaning of decision making competency in a risk management context in banking By choosing this poly dimensional approach the purpose of his work is to explore shortcomings of risk management approaches of financial institutions and to point out how they might be overcome
