Approaches to scaling small software companies without investors

Carolin Nothof, 2020-07-07. Master's Thesis from the year 2020 in the subject Business economics Information Management grade 1 3 University of Applied Sciences Kaiserslautern language English abstract. Venture capital funded companies are far more present in the media than organically grown companies. This makes us erroneously assume that there is only one way to build a successful company by raising VC venture capital. The truth is however that only a tiny fraction of all small businesses obtains VC in the course of their life span. In fact, from all the companies aspiring to receive funding through VC, 99% will never achieve this objective. Among the 1% that does achieve funding, there are companies that have to go out of business because they get overfunded and lose their focus. Others recognize that entrepreneurs and investors have fundamentally different motivations especially regarding the exit. Therefore, growth oriented founders of tech companies wonder whether it is possible for them to scale without investors and how they can approach to do so. This thesis aims to provide answers to these two questions primarily by investigating companies that have already scaled successfully and by extracting the main lessons from their growth journey.
