New Spiritual Architecture:

New Spiritual Architecture Phyllis Richardson, 2004 New Spiritual Architecture looks at ways in which contemporary architects are approaching religious or meditative space. The book focuses on churches, chapels, temples, synagogues, and mosques that have been built in the last few years and that represent a late twentieth/early twenty-first-century aesthetic. These buildings demonstrate how new ideas and developments in urban, domestic, and public architecture are being used to inform design that is intended for inspiration, worship, or meditation. The text discusses the ways in which architects manipulate light and space and considers the placement of these buildings in their surroundings. Following a brief introduction, the book explores the following five themes: New Traditions, Interventions, Retreats, Grand Icons, and Modest Magnificence. It includes 200 full-color illustrations and 100 line drawings.

BOOK JACKET New Sacred Architecture Phyllis Richardson, 2004 This timely book reflects an awakening of interest in religious faiths and the emergence of a global exchange of architecture and culture. While Spain's Rafael Moneo has recently completed a cathedral in Los Angeles, Britain's Thomas Heatherwick is designing a Buddhist temple in Japan. John Pawson is working on a Cistercian monastery in the Czech Republic, and Richard Meier has completed his Jubilee Church in Rome. It seems as one Wallpaper registered pundit commented, religion is getting a redesign and the architect's faith is as unimportant as his or her nationality. I Looking at ways in which contemporary architects are approaching religious or meditative space, this book focuses on churches, chapels, temples, synagogues, and mosques that have been built in the last few years and that represent a late twentieth/early twenty-first-century aesthetic.

Form of Flow Nathan Spurlin, 2012 Western civilization is engulfed in a process of change that Max Weber identifies as rationalization, the infusion of scientific method, technological improvement, and rational management in all areas of society. An unfortunate side effect of this rational knowledge is a loss of purpose or spiritual disenchantment. Weber states that The sacred grove has been logged and sold, the enchanted pool pumped dry. Parts of society, especially younger generations, no longer identify with the reassurances of religious myth in the light of a rationalized world. Architecture at its core is a cultural artifact that responds to its social, political, economic, and environmental contexts and expresses a multitude of cultural beliefs and imperatives. Sacred architecture has historically reflected the symbolic religious axioms, beliefs, and rituals of particular cultures whose ultimate goal is some element of transcendence. The process with which sacred architecture is designed has lost much of its relevance for a culture that no longer adheres to faith-based world religions but still searches for a spiritual outlet. Rationalization has resulted in a fundamental need for space to be developed for those looking to address their disenchantment in a rationalized world. A psychological theory known as Flow, developed by the Hungarian psychologist Mihaly Csikszentmihalyi, argues that people are most happy and fulfilled when in a state of controlled consciousness where a person is fully immersed in the task at hand. This state might be better recognized as being in the zone, which leads to an autotelic or intrinsically rewarding experience. The flow theory, named for the word commonly used to describe the feeling is ultimately concerned with cultivating happiness and promotes this state as optimal experience The spiritual sub culture of the Flow Art community has harnessed this concept in their meditative and self transformative practice of spinning Flow Art is comprised of a number of different disciplines that each emphasize techniques meant to find flow through patience balance focus and coordination Their aim is to utilize their craft as a tool to help themselves and others identify and cultivate flow in everyday life The sacred space archetype lends itself to the application of flow while the young evolving and undiscovered culture of the Flow Art community offers an ideal program to explore the potential of flow in built space The intersection of these concepts illustrate the theory of flow as an alternative lens for implementing and understanding the design of spiritual space as a derivation of sacred space Phenomenology and the Arts: Logos and Aisthesis Kwok-Ying Lau,Thomas Nenon,2020-01-30 This volume examines the great varieties of artistic experience from first hand phenomenological descriptions It features detailed and concrete analyses which provides readers with in depth insights into each specific domain of artistic experience Coverage includes phenomenological elucidation of the aesthetic attitude the power of imagination and the logic of sensibility The essays also detail concrete phenomenological analyses of aesthetic experiences in poetry painting photography drama architecture and urban aesthetics The book contains essays from Logos and Aisthesis Phenomenology and the Arts an international conference held at the Chinese University of Hong Kong It brings together a team of top scholars from both the East and the West and offers readers a global perspective on this interesting topic These innovative yet accessible essays will benefit students and researchers in philosophy aesthetics the arts and the humanities They will also be of interest to specialists in phenomenology
