Bertha Johnston, E. Lyell Earle, 1915 The Vanishing World of My Chicago Childhood Charles Zucker, 2025-11-15 In the modern world we have invented ways of speeding up invention and people's lives change so fast that a person is born into one kind of world grows up in another and by the time his children are growing up lives in still a different world Margaret Mead People and Places Cleveland and New York The World Publishing Company 1959 The Vanishing World of My Chicago Childhood is a delightful memoir of growing up in Chicago in the 1950s but it is much more than that The author argues that childhood has changed dramatically over the last seventy years and not for the better Zucker and his neighborhood pals played games outside almost constantly when the weather permitted Sixteen inch softball basketball touch football marbles kick the can and yo yos were among their favorites They also constructed their own soapbox cars built miniature golf courses chased butterflies hunted snakes camped overnight in vacant lots and shot bows and arrows When bad weather forced the kids indoors they played a wide variety of board games listened to music and read books In contrast the author observes that children today often spend hours indoors playing electronic games on phones computers or TVs leaving them with little time for outdoor play The author notes however that the infotainment revolution and the roots of modern American childhood began when he was a kid In the 1950s American families began purchasing television sets en masse Although he admits that American families including his own enjoyed watching television he believes its arrival in American homes marked the beginning of a growing social isolation that has had profound consequences for both children and adults As a result the childhood and the world that Zucker experienced growing up on the South Side of Chicago have largely vanished today

You Don't Know...My Story Hope Destiny, 2014-10-05 Have you ever wondered if the person you see everyday always had it together Do you ever wonder where they've been or what they've been thru Langston Hughes said it best when he said life for me ain't been no crystal stair Take a journey with me into my life as I tell you a tale from my childhood up into adulthood and air out all my dirty laundry Growing Up in the People's Republic W. Ye, 2005-12-10 In a conversational style and in chronological sequence Ye Weili and Ma Xiaodong recount their earlier lives in China from the 1950s to the 1980s a particularly eventful period that included the catastrophic Cultural Revolution Using their own stories as two case studies they examine the making of a significant yet barely understood generation in recent Chinese history They also reflect upon the mixed legacy of the early decades of the People's Republic of China PRC In doing so the book strives for a balance between critical scrutiny of a complex era and the sweeping rejection of that era that recent victim literature embraces Ultimately Ye and Ma intend to reconnect themselves to a piece of land and a period of history that have given them a sense of who they are Their stories contain intertwining layers of personal generational and historical experiences Unlike other memoirs that were written soon after the events of the Cultural Revolution Ye and Ma's narratives have been put together some twenty years later allowing for more critical distance The passage of time has allowed them to consider important issues that other accounts omit such as the impact of gender during this period of radical change in Chinese women's lives
